IRISH DISASTER?

BELFAST (UPI) — A leading Roman Catholic politician warned today of "complete disaster" in Northern Ireland if Protestants use their landslide victory in Thursday's constitutional convention elections to exclude Catholics from power in the province.

"Any attempt to subjugate the minority or keep them out of government now will mean complete disaster," Gerry Fitt, head of the moderate Social Democratic and Labor Party, said.

OTTAWA LEGISLATION SET

Death Penalty to End

By ANDRE OUIMET
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The federal government intends to abolish the death penalty once and for all, according to sources in the Liberal caucus.

Legislation is to be introduced "shortly" by Solicitor General Warren Allmand to end the awkward situation of having the federal cabinet commute death sentences for murderers of policemen and jail guards on duty in apparent defiance of the will of Parliament.

Eight men are currently under the shadow of the gallows, but the decision taken in caucus this week was precipitated by the impending commutation of Rene Vaillancourt, who is to hang May 13 for shooting a police constable in Toronto in 1973 after a holdup.

All death sentences have been commuted by cabinet for the last 13 years, when two men were hanged back-to-back in Toronto's Don Jail.

The Liberal caucus decided that this time, the death penalty legislation would be presented by the party rather than leaving it to individual members, as was done in 1973, when a five-year experimental and partial ban on hanging came up for renewal.

Attempts by Allmand to get a complete ban at the time were thwarted.

His newest proposal is expected to be similar to an amendment introduced at the time by Marcel Prud'homme (L—St. Denis) and James Flemming (L—York West).

That defeated proposal would have banned all hangings, but extended the mandatory sentences of murderers considerably — up to 20 years without parole for a police or jail guard killer.

Liberal caucus members felt the legislation would have no problem getting approved now that they sit in a majority position, and enough Conservative and New Democrat members shared their view to out-vote any Liberals who decided to bolt ranks because of fear of voter reaction.

A recent Gallup Poll showed that 69 per cent of Canadians surveyed favored a complete return to the death penalty — not only for murdering prison guards and policemen but also "any innocent person."

And earlier this week, John Reynolds (PC—Burnaby-Richmond-Delta) tabled a petition signed by 200,000 individuals who want a return to the gallows.

Prime Minister Trudeau's return from his trip to the Caribbean for the Commonwealth Conference on May 7 was awaited before an announcement of Vaillancourt's commutation was to be made, and legislation asking for an end to the death penalty would be introduced shortly afterwards, caucus sources said.

Last Men Back Midweek

Esquimalt and Saanich municipal workers are expected to be back on the job by the middle of next week, the last of the more than 1,700 CUPE workers in the Greater Victoria area to return to work following the three-month civic dispute.

The combined local of Saanich and Sidney Canadian Union of Public Employees members and the Esquimalt CUPE local both rejected the proposed settlement offered by municipal employers, but will carry on further bargaining sessions while they are back at work. The employees will return to work under previous contract pay rates.

Sidney council voted Friday to lift the lockout that has been in effect for three months and Saanich is expected to do the same at its meeting early next week.

Esquimalt CUPE members had expected to be on the picket line for some time yet, but Mayor Art Young said today he will recommend to council Monday that the lockout be lifted.

The vote is expected to pass easily and Young predicted the employees would be back at work Wednesday morning.

A surprised Larry Flannagan, president of the Esquimalt CUPE local's 85 members, said today the workers will go back if the lockout is lifted.

"I'm elated about this. I feel it's a victory in our favor," he said.

The mayor's recommendation to lift the lockout came as a surprise to the Esquimalt employees. The local had just

Terrorist Bombers Hit Nuclear Plant

STRASBOURG, France (AP) — Two bombs exploded 14 minutes apart on a construction site at the Fessenheim nuclear reactor today and French officials said the attack was apparently the work of a revolutionary group.

Officials said the explosions and a subsequent fire were in a "non-operative area" in the nuclear-reactor plant.

"Responsibility for the attack is being claimed by a revolutionary group that we have never heard of before," the officials said. "There were no injuries."

An anonymous telephone call to a newspaper from a man describing himself as a member of the "Meinhof-Puig Antich" group said that three explosive devices had been planted on the grounds.

The caller said that he had given a warning to officials at the reactor that the bombs would go off three-quarters of an hour before they were set to detonate.

Fessenheim is between Colmar and Mulhouse on the Rhine River which separates France and Germany.

There was no immediate identification of the "Meinhof-Puig Antich" group in France. Ulrike Meinhof is a West German anarchist serving an eight-year prison sentence for helping another anarchist escape custody. She is accused of helping run the Baader-Meinhof gang, blamed for a series of bombings and killings in West Germany.

500 Die in Angola

LUANDA, Angola (Reuter) — Between 500 and 1,000 people have been killed in fighting between Angola's three rival liberation movements in the last three days, sources at the city morgue say. Luanda residents today began a run on stores, stocking up on food supplies in fear of further violence.

Quake Unnoticed

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — An earthquake struck southern California Friday in an area so desolate that apparently nobody felt it.

Pound at New Low

LONDON (Reuter) — The British pound fell steadily on foreign exchange markets Friday to close at an all-time low against other major currencies. The pound's rate against the U.S. dollar fell by one cent, touching 2.3335.

School Lunch Terror

TORONTO (CP) — About 90 pupils and teachers, held hostage at gunpoint during lunch hour at an east-end school, were released unharmed Friday when a policeman persuaded a 14-year-old boy to surrender.

Staff-Sgt. Pat Keere said Friday that Constable Donald Buchanan talked to the suspect through the cafeteria door and convinced him to give up the .22-calibre rifle and several rounds of ammunition.

Before the boy surrendered, police said, one of the pupils leaped out of a second-storey window but was not injured.

Police said the boy walked into the cafeteria and ordered everyone to lie on the floor. Everyone complied after the suspect fired one shot into a wall.

Police were alerted by a pedestrian who saw the boy walking into the school armed with the gun. After an investigation, police said, they charged the boy with breaking and entering and theft of a gun.

He is also charged with possession of a weapon dangerous to the public peace.

The boy was released in custody of his parents and will likely appear Monday in juvenile court, police said.

The students were in Grades 5 to 8 and three teachers were involved.

One pupil, a girl, said "it was scary."

3 Air Canada Cheques Signed Without Looking

By ROB BULL
Times Quebec Bureau

MONTREAL — Yves Menard, Air Canada's former vice-president of marketing, told a federal inquiry Friday that he signed cheques on behalf of the company totalling $100,000 without reading the papers which accompanied them explaining why the payment was made.

The documents, which he signed, were prepared by two of his subordinates. Menard said he also failed to notice that the cheques were made out to an individual instead of a company.

Menard said he did not read the papers, which he placed in his personal files, until last month when he watched television news reports of a question about the payment in the House of Commons. He told reporters later he would not have signed if he had read the papers.

He also said the reason stated by the documents for the payment of a single $40,000 and two $30,000 cheques to Montreal travel agent R. Y. McGregor was not in fact why the money was paid.

The investigation by Mr. Justice Willard Zebedee Estey of the Ontario Supreme Court into the financial administration of the airline reached the end of its first week of hearings.

Testimony to date has offered little understanding of the choice of mechanism for the payment.

Menard said he signed the cheques and the letters prepared by his aides in order to secure on behalf of the airline an option to buy a share of McGregor's travel agency.

This, he explained, would be a step towards the airline's eventual participation in a nation-wide travel service.

The letters which accompanied the cheques and the forms authorizing payment indicated that the money was paid to McGregor for consultant services to influense governments in Latin America, the Middle East and in Canada.

At the time of the payment in November 1974, shortly before McGregor began lengthy medical treatment for a pulmonary embolism., Air Canada was aware that the federal government was contemplating negotiations with Venezuela and Lebanon for eventual Air Canada service.

At the same time, both Ontario and Quebec were drafting laws to regulate the travel industry.

But the payment to McGregor was part of a long-term Air Canada corporate strategy which would eventually enable the airline to provide customers with what Menard referred to several times as the "total travel experience."

This would eventually involve the company in such allied activities as hotels and tour promotion.

Menard said that once he and McGregor agreed on the arrangement in September 1974, he discussed the matter in detail with nobody either inside or outside the company, including Air Canada's chairman and managing director Yves Pratte who had been informed of Menard's general plans.

Hempsall Severance $20,773

A civil servant who resigned after three years service with the B.C. government has been awarded a $20,773 severance payment.

The cabinet approved the payment this week to Leslie Hempsall, former associate deputy of economic development who resigned in February.

"I know it's unusual," Economic Development Minister Gary Lauk said Friday when asked about the cabinet decision.

"But it was a decision of mine that he provided good service to us. I think there's nothing wrong with that," he said.

The payment is equal to six months salary, said Lauk, and will give Hempsall some time to set up his own consulting practice.

"I don't know if it is a precedent but I thought it would be reasonable in this case," Lauk said.

Both Hempsall and Lauk have said his departure is a resignation but opposition members have hinted in the house that the deputy was fired.

Hempsall, 54, was appointed deputy minister of the department in Jan., 1972, under the Social Credit government but was shifted to associate deputy in 1974.

At the time he left the government, Hempsall said:

"I was in industry before and now I've had three and a half years in government, so now I have enough experience on both sides to go it on my own. I got what I wanted out of it."

ROCKET ATTACK

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Arab guerrillas fired two Soviet-made rockets aimed at the Knesset (parliament) and other government buildings in Jerusalem today. But they missed their targets, causing only light damage and no casualties, Israeli police said.

In Beirut, the Palestinian guerrilla leadership said the rockets scored "direct hits" on the buildings and inflicted heavy material and human losses. It said the attack was carried out by a special guerrilla force operating inside Israeli-occupied territories.

A general mobilization was called when reports of the attack first reached police. Israeli soldiers joined in the operation and an army helicopter hovered over the site of one blast.

Indians 'Not Forced' to Take Money

PROTEST OVER

WAGNER, S.D. (UPI—Seven Indians who took over a packing plant, held two hostages for several hours and kept more than 100 law officers away with sporadic gunfire, surrendered Friday night following a barrage of teargas by state troopers. There was only one minor injury during the incident, police said.

No one is going to force money down Indians' throats, federal Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan said in Victoria Friday.

He made the comment in the face of announced policy of B.C. native Indians to refuse federal funds including welfare cheques and after day-long meetings with Human Resources Minister Norm Levi.

Mostly, the ministers were non-committal after their talks although both agreed "the ball was in their court" after an escalation of demonstrations by the Indians to protest lack of government action.

Both Buchanan and Levi declined to specify what form further government action would take.

Talks had ranged over the issues of cut-off lands and Indian land claims in B.C., Buchanan said.

Discussion was "blunt," and federal and provincial representatives got an eyeball-to-eyeball view, he added.

Buchanan said the federal government has traditionally accepted the responsibility to deal with legitimate claims of the Indian people — "it's not new ground being broken by me."

Although no schedule of meetings has been agreed on by the ministers it was accepted that further discussion would take place.

In a related development Atlin MLA Frank Calder has joined the battle for an Indian land claims settlement.

In a letter to Premier Barrett this week, Calder said he wished "to reiterate my requests for the provincial government to consider the advisability of participating with the federal government and native Indians of B.C. in negotiations" for land claims.

Meanwhile, Indians continue occupations of district Indian Affairs offices that began Thursday in Vernon and Kamloops.

Indians who occupied the department's office in Williams Lake ended their one-day sit-in Thursday without incident.

COPS, CHER AND DISNEY ROCKY LIKES THEM ALL

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Oh dear, they've gone and cancelled vice-president Rockefeller's favorite TV show!

Like millions of other North Americans after a hard day at the office, Rockefeller likes to come home, prop his feet up, and watch television—especially Cher and Mannix, which has come to the end of the road after eight seasons.

"I'm crazy about Mannix," Rockefeller told reporters recently in an informal chat. "I watch all those mysteries when I can." He also watches Disneyland every week.

"You're kidding," was a reporter's response.

"No. Columbo, he's great," Rockefeller said: "How do you think I know all this stuff about the CIA?"

"I saw Cher last Sunday," Rockefeller said. "I think she's got a great personality, don't you think so?"

Rockefeller also said he doesn't go to the movies and waits until they are televised. What was the last movie he went to? "Probably Ben Hur, but I don't remember," he said . . . not specifying whether it was the 1925 silent version or the remake starring Charlton Heston.

MD Blacklist Charge Made

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial government keeps a secret blacklist of doctors who consistenfly have irregular payment claims, executive of the BCMA said Friday.

Dr. William Jory, association general assembly chairman, said in an interview that neither the doctors involved nor the association have been told who is on the list.

During a tour of the government's Medical Services Commission offices "I spotted a black book . . . a real black book with a black cover," he said.

"It happened to be opened at a page that identified some physicians. I didn't take the matter further at the time but just thought we ought to know about it."

Attempts to discuss the list with the medical services commission resulted "in a kind of square dance as to whether there was a black book or not," he added.

Dr. Jory said he was subsequently informed that a special reference was kept of those claims that fell outside the usual pattern.

An MSC official said he is not aware of any blacklist.

"There are all sorts of reasons why some claims have to be processed by hand. Some are very complex."

Dr. Jory said he can understand why such a list should exist because "I can't believe that among 4,000 doctors sending in cards — virtually cheques to themselves — there aren't some oddballs coming up."

ENVOY TO CANADA SEEKS SANCTUARY

OTTAWA (CP) — Nguyen Quoc Tan, charge d'affairs at the now-defunct South Vietnamese embassy here, said today he is seeking landed immigrant status in Canada.

Tan said in an interview with Standard Broadcast News that he will ask Immigration Minister Robert Andras to grant landed immigrant status "for myself and for my staff and their families."

Tan said he "would never go to the United States."

He lived there for 4½ years "and I have been watching what the Americans did to Vietnam, how they treated us."

"That would be a terrible situation for me if I had to live among Americans again."

Asked if he is bitter, Mr. Tan replied: "That's the least I could say."

450 Refugees Reach Thailand

Times News Services

Approximately 450 foreigners who took refuge in Phnom Penh's French embassy when the city fell to the Khmer Rouge last month crossed into Thailand today. Most appeared weary but in good health.

The refugees, whose 20-truck convoy took three-and-a-half days to travel the 300 miles to the border, shook hands with a crowd of officials, relatives and newsmen and gratefully gulped soft drinks handed them by bystanders.

About 120 refugees still remain in Phnom Penh and there is no word on when they might be brought to the border.

Nine of the 26 newsmen who stayed in Phnom Penh until it fell April 17 were in the group crossing the frontier. They said they had agreed not to say or write anything until all the newsmen left Cambodia.

Meanwhile, the first U.S. 7th Fleet refugee ship from South Vietnam arrived at Subic Bay today with 2,000 evacuees.

The 32,800-ton helicopter carrier U.S.S. Hancock docked at the Subic Bay naval station, which has made special preparations to receive the rescue armada.

Navy authorities said seven more ships—including the U.S.S. Vancouver, Thomaston, and Peoria—were scheduled to arrive later today with about 20,000 more refugees.

Three merchant ships attached to the military sealift command and one Vietnamese merchant vessel were also coming in with refugees.

Lockout Lifted

received another set of picket signs, the third set used during the lockout.

The Esquimalt dispute was expected to continue longer than the others because of a Labor Relations Board charge pending against the municipality, charging the lockout is illegal.

The settlement offered by municipal employers was contingent on the union members dropping all charges, but the Esquimalt local voted to reject the settlement and carry through with the LRB charge.

Young said today that the local will be able to continue the LRB case which is expected to be heard in about three weeks.

He said, however, no bargaining will be carried on until after the resolution of the illegal lockout charge.

Some Sidney municipal workers returned to work today and the rest are expected back on the job Monday.

Even Table Causes A Hassle

WASHINGTON (FP) — Opening skirmishes in a bitter battle for Canadian and United States Arctic gas development resemble the Paris peace talks on Vietnam.

The gas pipeline protagonists, like the parties to the peace talks, have been arguing about the kind of table to be used in their confrontation.

They have also been arguing about the sound system to be used in a public hearing room.

And they have been arguing about the agenda for public hearings which start here on Monday.

The protagonists are Alaskan Arctic Gas Pipeline Company and El Paso Alaska Company, rivals for a pipeline route.

They will face each other Monday at the hearings conducted by the Fedeal Power Commission to decide whether the gas will be carried along a Mackenzie Valley pipeline or across Alaska.

The similarity to the Paris peace talks of seven years ago was noted by observers to preliminary negotiations which were held here this week before Judge Nahum Litt, who will preside over the applications of El Paso and Arctic Gas.

According to these observers, El Paso lawyer Paul Connolly demanded a change in the seating arrangements.

El Paso officials were still unsure where they would be sitting, one said late Friday.

Experts To Meet

KINGSTON, Jamaica (FP) — A Commonwealth committee of experts is expected to meet in Ottawa this summer to work on proposals leading to a changed world economic order.

Prime Minister Trudeau offered the Canadian locale and assistance to the group at the Commonwealth heads of government meeting here Friday.

Membership of the committee and its terms of reference will probably be worked out in detail over the weekend while the leaders take a break from their formal meetings in Kingston, he told a press conference.

Stanfield Must Go! Angry Reynolds Quits

OTTAWA (CP) — Amid increased rumblings of discontent within the Conservative caucus, John Reynolds, a member of the opposition shadow cabinet, has quit his assignment, largely in protest of Robert Stanfield's continued leadership.

Reynolds (Burnaby-Richmond-Delta) wrote the Conservative leader, told him he was through as the official critic for the department of supply and services, and said Stanfield should vacate the leadership.

Reynolds confirmed his action when approached by a reporter. "I didn't intend this to be made public," he said. "I wrote a confidential letter to Mr. Stanfield, but since you seem to know. . . ."

Yes, he said, Stanfield should step down immediately and an interim leader should be elected by caucus. "And because I feel so strongly about this, I felt I simply couldn't carry on in an appointment he made."

Reynolds said the party needs new life and new direction. Things were getting worse and "I hate to think what we're going to be like by the end of June."

Reynolds said he will not be a leadership contender, "and I am not going to change my mind." There are other caucus members interested "and I would like to see four or five stand up in caucus and tell us what they stand for."

Reynolds is known to be annoyed by official party criticism of as many as 30 Conservative MPs meeting off the Hill to discuss the party's direction and future.

Socred Warchest Swells: Barrett

Premier Barrett claimed Friday the Social Credit party is spending $125,000 a month on an advertising campaign.

Earlier the premier had said large corporations are pouring $75,000 a month into Socred coffers in an effort to oust the NDP government, but Friday he said that figure was too low.

Most of the money is coming out of a $4.5 million fund being controlled in Vancouver, he said.

Barrett said former Socred attorney-general Robert Bonner, former MacMillan Bloedel president J. V. Clyne and Vancouver lawyer Arthur Foukes meet regularly to disburse monies from the fund.

But Opposition Leader Bill Bennett quickly denied this statement as "absolutely untrue."

The NDP planned to spend $300,000 this year said Bennett and the Social Credit Party will spend less than that to run its central office and pay for all advertising pamphlets and radio-TV advertising.

The Socreds now have 41 local store front offices around the province and Bennett said the cost of operating them is paid from local constituency funds.

He denied totally any knowelge of the $4.5 million fund.

Barrett called the Socred war chest "corporate attempts to manipulate the electorate," but he said "the people will not be fooled."

The Socred leader has denied his party's funds are coming from big business and said the money is being raised locally by the more than 40,000 Social Credit members.

He said extensive Socred radio and TV advertising is needed to counteract the NDP's misuse of public funds in government advertising.

Trustees Blocked

MONTREAL (CP) — The trusteeship imposed on the Montreal local of the Letter Carriers Union of Canada was blocked Friday by a temporary injunction issued in Superior Court.

The trusteeship was imposed Monday by the LCUC's national executive in Ottawa, until May 12.

The LCUC's national and Montreal executives are to appear before a hearing on that date.

Guy Morrissette, president of the LCUC Montreal local, had sought the injunction after he was suspended Monday, along with his four-man executive, by the national executive.

The injunction came on the fourth day of disrupted mail service in the city since Morrissette's suspension.

Although letter carriers in the 2,500-member local returned to work Friday, mail truck drivers remained on strike, leaving the carriers little mail to deliver.

Bad Meat Linked to Crime

MONTREAL (CP) — Police have seized hundreds of pounds of meat in 40 raids in Montreal and the Eastern Townships, a spokesman for the Quebec Police Commission inquiry into organized crime said Friday.

The spokesman said the raids were part of an investigation by the commission, investigating possible underworld sales of spoiled meat to Quebecers.

He said the commission is looking into a meat-distribution network which sells for human consumption tons of meat destined for dog food plants.

The raids were conducted by members of the RCMP, Quebec Provincial Police and Montreal Urban Community police. Federal health and welfare department inspectors were also involved.

The spokesman confirmed that the meat will be analysed shortly and is under guard in Montreal until the investigation is finished.

Documents were seized in the search to see if underworld figures are involved in selling spoiled meat.

The search warrants were signed by Judge Jean Dutil of sessions court, chairman of the organized crime inquiry.

Public hearings are to resume May 20.

A commission source said police have evidence that meat from cows and other domestic animals that died of old age or sickness is being sold in the Montreal area.

The source said: "The minute a farmer phones his local dog food contact to come and pick up a carcass of an animal which died of some disease or something, the organizers of this network go to work and the animal ends up in their warehouses."

The meat then is shipped to Montreal, the source said. "We've discovered that the meat isn't even shipped here in refrigerated trucks."

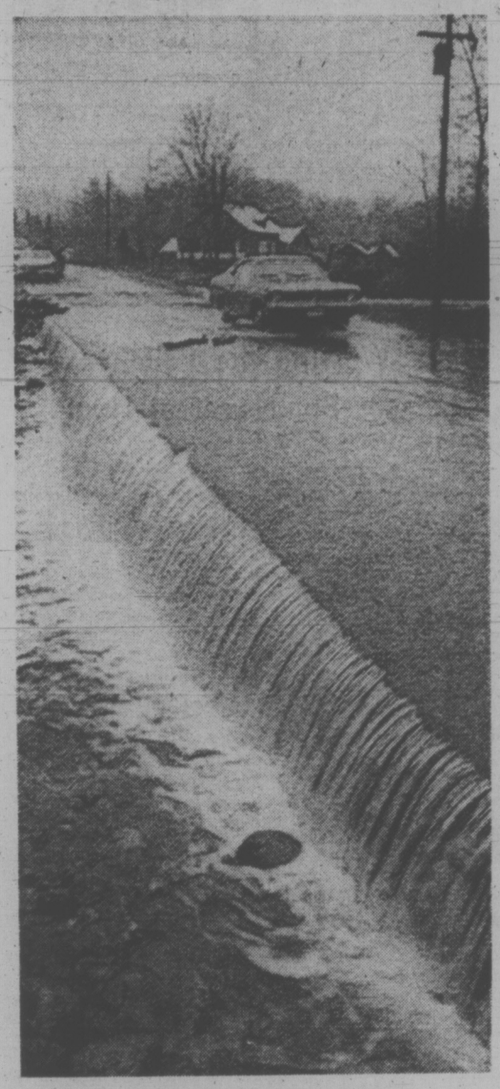
CHAMPERS SHOCKER

VANCOUVER (CP) — Opposition leader Bill Bennett said Friday that a champagne celebration of the fall of South Vietnam by several government MLAs was irresponsible and shocking.

Peter Rolston said he and several other NDP members opened a bottle of champagne to celebrate the Viet Cong victory.

The Social Credit Leader said the communist victory was a tragedy and added that Rolston's statements work against attempts to show the NDP government as moderate.



Where Did Road Go . . . ?

Heavy rains combined with melting snow have caused spring floods in the Sault Ste. Marie area, closing schools and isolating homes. Rampaging floodwaters have even turned the shoulder of this highway into a waterfall, washing away the road surface.

Pity the homeowner with $30,000 insurance on a $60,000 home.

Due to inflation in home construction costs in recent years, many homeowners are finding themselves in this precarious position. They have insurance policies that do not adequately cover the investment they now have in their homes.

This has troubled insurance people and, as a result, many have developed systems to help their insureds arrive at a proper level of "insurance to value".

One such system is the Home Evaluation Guide. It's issued by the Insurance Bureau of Canada and has been adopted by a wide cross-section of the insurance industry.

We are pleased to make it available to you. It could be the first step in helping you upgrade your home insurance to meet current realities.

By following the four easy steps in the Guide (it will only take minutes) and mailing it to your agent, broker or insurance company, you can arrive at an estimation of what it would cost to rebuild your home today.

From there, you and your agent can decide on any changes to be made in your policy.

In addition to the Guide, we are making available two other booklets: "Sixty ways to prevent fire in your home", and "Has your home outgrown your home insurance coverage?".

Please send me the booklets indicated above. I understand that there is no obligation and that no salesman will call.

They Want Simple Justice

You have stolen our land. You have polluted our rivers and streams. You have forced us onto small reserves, and made them smaller. Your culture is disintegrating and we won't be dragged along down with you. To hell with handouts.

Angry words from British Columbia's native Indians, but should anyone be surprised that they are talking tough?

The provincial government seems to have been taken by surprise. According to reports, the New Democratic Party caucus and Premier Dave Barrett's cabinet haven't grasped the seriousness of the crisis which B.C.'s native people have come to.

"Look what we've done for you — more than any other provincial government," is the administration's attitude. And it's true, of course. Several million dollars for the Port Simpson fish cannery, more money for Burns Lake natives to take a share in a new sawmill project, homeowner grants and second mortgages available, retroactively, to all Indians in the province. A respectable record, if the government was dealing with any other underprivileged sector of the electorate, such as farmers, or single mothers, or the young unemployed.

And although the government's previous stonewalling tactics have changed to a kind of respectful attention, it still treats the land claims and hunting and fishing rights and aboriginal claims question as if they were simple problems to be settled by quiet, unemotional negotiations.

The government appears to ask native people — who form about five per cent of B.C.'s 2.3 million population — to show their political clout. It's the glib answer supplied to groups of trade unionists or francophones or proponents of equal government aid to private schools — go out and show us you have political support, especially in the NDP.

Never mind the simple justice of any group's grievance or how long and patiently it has striven for a fair settlement.

But the Indians aren't trade unionists or parents arguing against the demonstrable injustice of paying double taxation to educate their children in the schools of their choice. They've tried the quiet and meek route, paved with handouts. They've decided now that independence has no price tag, can't be bought with aid money, and they want to stand on their own.

It's a position the rest of us should applaud. It's going to mean a reckoning, an adjustment, a settlement of old, old claims, and there will be more demonstrations and blockades and occupations before it is accomplished.

The negotiations will be noisy, argumentative and will result in discomfort and dislocation for some people, but they can't be put off any longer. The time has come to deal with the Indian people of B.C. fairly, as equals, as partners with much to learn from each other.

If we cannot, let there be no more pious talk of the cultural mosaic in Canada and our rich multicultural heritage, our ethnic and linguistic diversity with room for all to grow and change. It hasn't worked for the Indians.

Splitting Oil Hairs

Ottawa's weaselly attitude on the question of paying for the clean-up of a 1973 oil spill in Oak Bay — a grand total of $463.91 is at stake — reflects the legalistic cast of mind which dominates the federal government.

Who else but all those lawyers in parliament and at the upper reaches of the bureaucracy could find such an ingenious loophole to avoid paying for the spill's damage? The money exists — no quibble about that. Shippers must pay 15 cents into a clean-up fund for every ton of oil shipped by water.

But the catch is that Oak Bay must be able to prove — beyond the shadow of a doubt, we presume — that the oil, actually, in fact, incontrovertibly and as party of the third part, did come from a ship.

Now in the Oak Bay spill, the stuff came ashore unnoticed. Nobody actually saw a ship pump outs its bilge tanks. The oil was never directly linked with a ship, although it must have come from some type of maritime conveyance. It couldn't have dropped out of the sky, and no one has yet discovered oil behind the tweed curtain.

The amount of money at stake is small, but what happens in major spills? Environment Minister Jeanne Sauve says she "hoped" the shipper's fund can be made more accessible and money can be paid out more quickly. We hope so too. If Oak Bay's experience is any indicator of the speed with which Ottawa will deal with, say an Alaskan tanker spill sometime in the near future, the trans-Alaska pipeline will be dry before the bills are paid.

HAROLD GREER

Judy Lamarsh and TV Violence

TORONTO — Suppose you are the premier of Ontario and you have an election coming up. Things look pretty grim, times aren't the best, and for one reason or another people are pretty fed up with you. You haven't got the money in the public treasury or the willpower in the cabinet — to do much about it, so it looks like you're about to be turfed out.

What to do, what to do?

Well, your political organization, that thing those nasty press guys keep calling the Big Blue Machine, tells you that its surveys and charts show people are upset by, among other things, all the violence that's around these days. Violence in the streets, violence in the news, violence in the movies and on television. It's a worrisome thing, especially because of its possible effect on the kids.

Now if you could just get on the right side of that worry with the right handle before the election, a lot of voters might regard you more kindly, right? Show them you're concerned too and determined to do something about it, that sort of thing.

Great idea. But how do you get on the right side of the issue, how do you get a handle on the thing, when there isn't much you can or want to do about it?

Stick Neck Out?

Violence on television is the big problem, as far as the kids are concerned, and television is a federal jurisdiction. Even if the Canadian programs could be cleaned up, there would still be the American stuff coming from the border stations and via cable. Of course, you could stick your neck out and pass a law that might not stand up constitutionally in the courts. But no, let's not get carried away.

Violence in the movies? Now that's different. No problem about jurisdiction there. The Ontario Theatres Act has been in the law books for years, and it says all film exhibited in the province must first be approved by the board of censors, and that covers film advertising too. The legislation even authorizes the government to spell out what kind of films can be shown.

Violence is a big problem there, too. Boy, if you think the stuff they let through is bad, you should see the stuff they cut out. Five absolute rejections and 120 deletions in 783 films in 1973. And that stuff that's been flooding in recently from Taiwan and Hong Kong!

The Chinese used to make nice, historical-type productions but then they discovered the sex and violence market over here, and wow!—172 Chinese cheapies in 1973 alone, second only to the U.S.

So maybe you could do something there. Hell, the government has never even passed a regulation spelling out what kind of films can be shown, just lets the censor board fly by the seat of its pants.

You could regulate, for example, that violence for the sake of violence, that the undue exploitation of violence, will not be allowed in films. That has a nice ring to it, and would show folks that at least you're serious and determined to do something about the problem.

But just a moment, now. That word "censor" doesn't have a nice ring to it. (Lord, why wasn't it changed years ago?) The civil rightists would be up in arms overnight. If you passed a regulation like that, Pierre Berton would be sure to say that King Lear, Macbeth, Othello and other Shakespearean gore had been banned in Ontario. Irving Layton might even write a poem about it.

JUDY LAMARSH
. . . making political comeback?

(Lord, why he is so hipped on pornography?)

Besides, you couldn't get a regulation like that through the cabinet. Goes against the Conservative philosophy. Take that speech on television violence by Attorney-General John Clement to party faithful.

John was all against it but there isn't, he said, anything the government can do about it.

"Social progress is not a government program," John said. "Conservatives don't believe that the good life can be legislated or announced in party policy." Lord, why don't these guys read a little history before they say things like that? What does he think legislation is supposed to do?

Lordy, lordy, what to do?

Stop a bit. How about the time a year or so ago when you discovered violence in amateur hockey, after that young fellow up in Bramalea was killed in a brawl? Your good friend Bill McMurtry he helps Alan Eagleson negotiate those million-dollar contracts for the professional hockey players conducted a special inquiry for you.

Nothing much came of it, of course, because the government certainly wasn't prepared to force the amateurs to do what Bill wanted them to do, but it got a lot of press and showed people you were concerned. Boy, do you remember how Bill got into the tussle with Clarence Campbell, and how old Clarence claimed there wasn't any violence in the National Hockey League and even if there was, it was good for the box-office?

Of course, a lowly special inquiry into violence on television and in the movies would never do. It would have to be a royal commission at least, with public hearings and grand terms of reference, and take a long, long time.

Silly Job

How about: "To study the effects on society of the increasing exhibition of violence in the communications industry" and "to determine if there is any connection or a cause and effect relationship between this phenomenon and the incidence of violent crime in society"?

It's all been done before in the U.S., but you could say this will be an "Ontario study" related to "Ontario needs." That has a nice, nationalistic ring to it.

Great idea. Now who is there silly enough to take on the job of royal commissioner for a couple of years? Maybe not so silly. The job will pay $250 per day. It will have to be someone in the public eye, a big man, someone the opposition especially the Grits—can't object to.

Of course Judy LaMarsh. Perfect. Judy of the truth squad, Judy of the hotline show, Judy the bird in the gilded cage who, as a federal Grit, once tried to reform the CBC. The word is that Judy's pretty upset with the Ontario Grits these days because she made noises about making a political comeback provincially and didn't get any encouragement whatever.

Maybe she's just mad enough to go for it. Let's give her a try . . .

And so, dear reader, Ontario is to have a royal commission into the effects on society of violence in the communications industry, with LaMarsh as chief commissioner. And who knows? Before this circus is over, we may even have Clarence Campbell as commission counsel.

EDITOR'S NOTEBOOK

Wowing the Fellaheen . . . But Never at Home

Our prime minister has the interesting habit of saying the most fascinating things when he is out of the country.

At home he is usually limited to oblique statements: "The universe is unfolding as it should" or "fuddle-duddle."

But take the man abroad, let him ride a Russian troika, visit London's soiled ambience, or swim in a tropical pool and he says the most uncanny things, things that would cause a flutter among all those muted wool suits in the PMO's establishment back in the east block.

During a 1971 Moscow visit he told his stolid hosts, "Canadians are more and more sensitive to the dangers of American economic domination."

He went on to cite the danger to Canada's national identity from powerful U.S. influences in the cultural, economic and military fields. It wasn't just that he said it, but it was the place he chose to say it that sent the more reactionary editorial writers to their typewriters.

Only a few months ago in London he told the British Broadcasting Corporation that if Canadian labor didn't restrain its demands the government might have to use legislative powers to curb labor's power.

Once again the reactionary editorial writers rushed to their desks and wrote long tomes full of praise this time for the prime minister. Once home, however, he announced a royal commission to inquire into the power of big business. Home seems to have a dampening effect on his oratorical powers, not to mention his thinking.

This week he was in Kingston, Jamaica, for the Commonwealth Conference, and again his oratorical powers bloomed like a lush hibiscus.

The fall of South Vietnam has undermined the credibility of the United States as an ally and destabilized the world power balance, he said.

"The leadership that has evidently been exercised in Southeast Asia has come to nought," he added, proclaiming a self evident truth.

But when Canadian prime ministers criticize U.S. policies — a rare occurrence in years of Liberal hegemony — the "Canadian desk" in the U.S. state department arouses itself from deep slumber and takes copious notes.

When former Prime Minister Lester Pearson voiced the opinion that the U.S. should stop bombing Hanoi's civilian population U.S. President Lyndon Johnson reportedly flew into a rage at such impertinence from Canada.

In criticizing the credibility of the U.S. as an ally, Trudeau's remarks implicitly suggest that Canada too may be uncomfortable with such a fair weather friend. At least that might be the interpretation of a few red neck congressmen and El Paso gas.

If that wasn't enough heresy for one day, the prime minister said Canada has no interest in welcoming white racists fleeing a newly-liberated black ruled Rhodesia.

"We're not panting to have this immigration take place," said our man abroad.

Holy maple leaf! He sounds like the Trudeau of the old Cite Libre days, the guy who marched in the streets against injustice, the guy we elected prime minister with a vague hope that he would deliver us from decades of dullness.

But when he jets back to Ottawa next week, after wowing the fellaheen of other climes, the Liberal party will enfold him, the nicely tailored wool suits will cluster around, and the Gothic heaviness of Parliament Hill will weigh the man down.

John Diefenbaker will splutter rage across the Commons; the Air Canada inquiry will continue in Montreal; the harbor dredging inquiry will continue in Toronto, and our man at the helm will vanish into his veiled thoughts.

The universe will enfold as it shouldn't. — G.R.O.

A Nature Ramble With Skipper

By Freeman King

When we think of motion and apply it to nature, just what do we think about? Motion is thought of mainly as moving from one place to another.

Plants have this quality in a very limited way. Those that do generally send out tendrils which anchor them into the ground. Often the parent plant will die off, but in the end the plant has moved from one place to another.

Dandelions have a way in which they spread the wide dispersion of lightweight seeds.

Some water plants also send out tentacles which anchor into the ground and start up new plants.

Then we come to the almost microscopic animals that live in fresh water, often anchored to some other thing such as the hydra, yet they stretch and bend and a tentacle will take hold of another plant. So the hydra lets go of its particular plant and moves.

Even the one-celled animals have movement and the ability to move from place to place, like the paramecium. Hairlike cilia on its body act like oars and are used when the animal swims.

Even the sea anemone is constantly moving up and down in search of food.

Some anemones even lie on their sides and glide over rocks and so leave bits of their bodies lying on the rocks which will grow into other separate creatures.

Then there are the tube feet of the star fish which are able to hang on to rocks, enabling the star fish to pull itself along. Even the jellyfish can move, mainly up and down, and it is subject to wind and tide but it is adequate for everything that it has to do.

What about the slug? It moves about floating on the ground with its foot. This gives out a slime continuously, making the slug's own road. Snails are the same.

Let's also take a look at the centipede or the millipede, which seems to have many legs to get around with, except millipedes have two legs per segment and the centipede only one.

If you have ever noticed how these little creatures move, it is in the form of a wave-like motion, yet each one is adapted to its own way of life.

Look at snakes, too. They have no legs at all yet they can move quite rapidly. They move by their ability to put their strong muscles to work, and the under plates on their bodies help to hold onto the ground or whatever it is the snakes are moving across.

As you wander the trails and byroads, what can you find out about movements in nature?

Crocodile Tears

Tears rolled down my cheeks as I listened in the public gallery of the legislature to the speeches of Pat McGeer and Garde Gardom on the subject of the ICBC deficit and their deep concern that this deficit will have to be provided from the pockets of "the unfortunate to give to those who can afford cars," etc." It is most refreshing to listen to the concern of these two MLAs who represent two of the wealthiest ridings in B.C.

I am a pensioner and a taxpayer and prior to the establishment of the Autoplan I paid $22.50 for license plates and insurance of $97 — a total of $117.50. I now pay $82 for the same car and the same coverage. Since 1972 the "private insurance companies" have increased their rates in provinces without Autoplan by some 40 per cent.

I am quite aware of the fact that the difference is supplied from general revenue and if the taxpayer has to cover this, shortage in order to avoid the rip-off of the general driving public by the so-called private insurance companies then I think the money is well spent, for the profits of the insurance companies are funnelled off to Toronto, Chicago, New York and London. In addition under Autoplan a large part of the premiums stay in the province.

In the "good old days" when the private insurance companies were busy ripping off the driving public, large differentials were charged for a driver with a clean driving record who happened to move say to Prince George. Many items such as liquor store prices, Medicare and hospital care premiums stay the same wherever one may live in the province and I think this is just.

The Liberal party has always been a party of big business and one only has to look at the composition of the Liberal-appointed Senate and one quickly understands why even a Liberal government is having troubles in passing a competition bill and in its endeavor to try and obtain a more equitable banking act. I would remind these two MLAs that it was only under pressure from the CCF that Mackenzie King agreed to institute old age pensions and unemployment insurance and that it was in the provinces with CCF or NDP governments that such social programs as Medicare, hospital care and Pharmacare to say nothing of Mincome were instituted.

I could never understand why the private insurance companies always complained of losing money in the auto insurance but when a commission was instituted by the Socreds to examine the problem these self-same companies spent some $60,000 to oppose a provincial plan. As a businessman of some 30 years' experience I know this does not add up. I would urge MLAs Gardom and McGeer to spare their crocodile tears for more worthy causes. — M. P. B. Wrixon, 301 - 1701 Cedar Hill X Road.

Cyclist's Dream

Something happened on Sundays in Ottawa that I really enjoyed. It was that on every Sunday in the summer the road along the Ottawa River was closed to cars up to one p.m. so cyclists could ride at a leisurely speed without the worry of getting hit by a car.

So I thought maybe we could do the same thing in Victoria but instead cut off Beach Drive. The police could set up road blocks and it would be a new tourist attraction. — Paul Kotturi, Grade 6, Frank Hobbs Elementary School.

Sam's Shuffle Clears Air on Possible Conflict

Outward calm and sang-froid generally conceal inner jealousy and seething ambition in the annual game of committee musical chairs played by every municipal council in B.C.

It's a game in which the players are the aldermen, the musical director is the mayor and the prizes are those prestigious, interesting jobs which — along with a miserable few thousand dollars — help to make the soliciting indignities of municipal elections worth enduring.

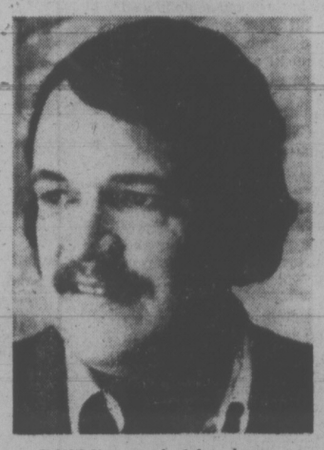
However, once the super-burgher has allotted the various jobs and responsibilities on the basis of professional ability, enthusiasm, favoritism or whatever, that's usually that for another year.

The worthy but dull Ald. Pompous placed in charge of cemeteries and weed control may envy the brash Ald. Whizzkid overlording land-use and planning, where all the action is, but there's precious little he can do about it. Except perhaps to impress the mayor with his energetic tenure in tombstones and hope for better things next January.

Of course, there are the occasional exceptions to this rule, occurrences so rare that they cry out for explanation. Consider, for example, the curious case of the grand committee shuffle at Victoria City Hall last week.

Why, out of the blue and only one-third of the way through the year, would Mayor Peter Pollen want to switch around the portfolios of four aldermen?

And why juggle the names and jobs in the way he did: Ald. Michael Young from planning and zoning to public works and traffic; Ald. Alf Hood from finance to Young's former bailiwick; Ald. Bill Tindall from public works to central area development and transportation planning; and Ald. Sam Bawlf from central area development to finance?



BAWLF . . . asked for change

By PAUL MOSS
Times City Hall Reporter

The apology for an explanation which was all that Pollen offered at the time could have satisfied no one knowing anything at all about city affairs. Some vague bit of bureaucratic prose about the aftermath of the strike-lookout and the back-to-work problems necessitating administrative reorganization.

Really, your worship?

Among the theories on the real motives which have been bandied around town since Pollen's stirring of the aldermanic pot, there are some wild notions.

One is that it was some sort of devious move on Pollen's part to shaft Hood — a likely and powerful mayoralty candidate later this year — because the mayor has already anointed Young his successor.

But in that case why give Hood what is generally considered to be the most important job on council? And why remove from that post Young, the chosen one, who has handled it with legal efficiency for three and a half years?

No, a far more credible explanation is that the general redeployed his officers because he wanted to make darned sure that one of them, honorable fellow though he is, would have not the faintest blot on his escutcheon.

Which is to say that Pollen was deeply worried about the potential conflict of interest situation inherent in Sam Bawlf's dual role as a developer heavily involved in the downtown-Old Town area, and as an alderman directly responsible for guiding the development of that area.

While Pollen this week maintained a somewhat embarrassed silence on the affair, Bawlf himself was ready to talk and in fact volunteered this explanation:

"Basically what I did was I asked him (Pollen) for a change. I don't want there to be any more criticism of my role in attempting to rehabilitate old buildings and my planning role."

"I am not going to tell you there is a conflict of interest because I don't believe there is. I just feel that I don't want there to be any doubts in anyone's mind on this score."

Therefore, Bawlf added, he had told Pollen it would be desirable if he served "in some other capacity to allay any such suspicions."

There was, though, another reason for seeking a change. Bawlf recalled that when he first joined council more than two years ago the city faced a "planning crisis" in meeting the threat of massive development both in the James Bay and downtown areas.

With that threat now effectively removed by appropriate zoning policies, Victoria is facing a "financial crisis" in his view — a crisis almost entirely due to its fiscal relations with other levels of government and particularly the provincial government.

Bawlf, who for months has been berating the province for paying less than its rightful share of property taxes on government holdings in the city, said his new job as finance committee chairman will give him scope to continue his sniping operations. "I want to go after that money," he said.

If the committee changes only clear the air concerning the alderman's position, they will have been well worthwhile. Aldermen and officials alike must be heaving a collective sigh of relief, for many of them admit in private, off-the-record comments that they, too, were sorely troubled.

Not one implies that Bawlf in any way during his period on council has ever used his public office to further his private interests. But that is hardly the point.

The crux of the matter is that the potential existed for a conflict of interest in the generally accepted meaning of the phrase.

And where there is the possibility for any elected representative to appear in the public eye as less than the shining white, blue-eyed innocent, no matter how unfair such suspicions might be, there will always be those who point the accusing finger.

The only extraordinary aspect to the whole affair is that it took Pollen and Bawlf so long to recognize the danger signals.

'I'm an Old-Fashioned Kind of Socialist'

Rosemary's Campaign Livens a Dull Race

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

Rosemary Brown believes it is time the New Democratic Party taught Canadians the meaning of socialism.

Socialism is a basic commitment to public ownership of the economy, she says, and shouldn't be confused with social work or social welfare programs.

"We socialists certainly don't corner the market on humanitarian principles. There are all kinds of capitalist countries that have really good welfare programs . . . but welfare programs are not socialism.

"And a welfare state does not lead to socialism," she said in an interview.

"I'm a humanitarian, I'm a Christian but I don't confuse the two issues and think just because we have a guaranteed income for people over 60 that we've achieved socialism."

As a humanitarian, she will continue to support welfare programs, but as a socialist she will fight for public ownership of the means of production as a way of redistributing income among the working people.

The NDP is committed to that economic philosophy, said Brown, and the public should know that's what it's voting for if it elects a socialist government.

She doesn't agree with people in the party who want to soft sell socialism. If the NDP waters down its socialist platform or modifies it or keeps it under wraps in order to make it more acceptable to an ill-informed electorate, she said, the party will be elected without a mandate to carry out its philosophy.

In the same way, she says she will not soft sell her own philosophical commitments in her fight to win the leadership of the federal NDP party.

"I'm sorry if I come across as being radical but I have found that, for me, it works best to be quite honest in what I'm doing and the kinds of compromises people suggest I make in order to win the leadership, to me, are basically dishonest.

"What you see is what you get and what I say is what I mean. I want the decision to support me to be based on what I really am."

But what Rosemary Brown believes she "really is" and what the public conceives her to be may be quite different.

Talking quietly in her office over cups of coffee, the 44-year-old Jamaican-born MLA presents an image quite different from her fellow NDP backbenchers in the legislature. She is sophisticated, articulate and impeccably well-dressed — like a woman from the fashionable Point Grey area of Vancouver should be.

The wife of a psychiatrist and mother of three, she speaks with quiet confidence about her role as feminist and "an old-fashioned kind of socialist."

A social worker by profession, she speaks eagerly and knowledgeably on a variety of political and social issues and insists with a sigh of frustration that she is not a "one-dimensional person."

"I'm not a monolithic person. I have all kinds of interests but anyone who tries to get a profile on me by reading in the media always asks why I care only about women and blacks."

As the first black woman elected to a legislature in Canada and as an outspoken battler for women's rights with the B.C. Status of Women before her 1972 landslide election victory in Vancouver-Burrard, it was inevitable Brown would start getting headlines for her speeches in the legislature on racial and sexual equality.

But she firmly believes that the press in the past, and now during her active leadership campaign across the country, has cast her into "an unfair mold" from which she cannot escape.

"I have no problem getting coverage in the campaign. The media pick me up wherever I go because I'm colorful," she said with a laugh.

"But they only pick me up on two things — women and race. In B.C. they'll also pick up on tenants, welfare and day-care. The media are curious about me but it would have been nice if they hadn't decided to box me in so completely.

"I can talk until I'm blue in the face, which is not the easiest thing in the world for me to do, about all kinds of economic issues and about anything in the world, and I can be confident the media will not report it because it doesn't have to do with race, women or with welfare programs."

Brown doesn't hold with the theory that people should support her either because she's a woman or because she's a black, in order to set a precedent.

They should vote for her because she's a socialist who is a feminist, she believes, and they should not withhold their votes because she is black.

Most of her support in the campaign so far is coming from the left, the women and the old-timers in the NDP, said Brown. The older people, who have been sending her $2 or $3 from their Mincome cheques each month, support her because she says she wants to get back to the kind of economic issues the CCF party was first built on.

Her priority as leader would be to organize the party at the grassroots level and concentrate on the Maritimes and Eastern Canada. A national newspaper for the party and a strong educational program would be essential components of that organizing program.

Some areas of party policy need definite strengthening and Brown said policy conventions would have to deal with basic issues like the question of control versus ownership of the economy.

"We also need some rational policy for repatriation — some rational way of dealing with the land and corporations and industry which have fallen into the hands of people outside Canada. We have to have a strong commitment to dealing with secondary industry and unemployment."

A restructuring of the Canadian economy does not have to come at revolutionary speed, said Brown, and there are a number of moderate, initial steps she would take as leader of a federal government.

"As a federal government we would set an example by renationalizing the CNR, the CBC and Air Canada. These corporations supposedly are owned by the people but obviously run and controlled by the private sector on it's own behalf," she said.

The government's own collective agreements with civil servants provide another avenue for setting an example of redistributing income to lower echelons of workers.

"We don't need a revolution in Canada. Our most powerful tool is the ballot box."

But Brown believes the real power for changing the structure of society in Canada comes at the federal level and that's why she is seeking the national party leadership.

Her desire to run federally is not an expression of disappointment with the achievements of B.C.'s first socialist government, she said, but a realization that even if there were 10 strong provincial NDP governments they couldn't effect the economic changes the party is committed to.

"I realize that we can never succeed in doing even the kind of major things we want to do provincially as long as we have to deal with the free enterprise party federally. They block us constantly."

"It's something that you've always sort of known but certainly when you operate as a provincial government it brings it home very clearly to you."

Brown said she would look forward to continuing in provincial politics if she doesn't succeed in her leadership bid but the thought of working across the country to put the party together for the next election "really excites" her.

"I think certainly by the next election we should have strengthened our position to such an extent that we would be well on our way to moving out of the third party position and certainly within another two elections or so we should be ready to make up the government of this country.

"That is my commitment and I work very hard at whatever it is I set out to do. I don't fool around."

Brown hasn't been fooling around in her campaign. She has been more active and has attracted far more attention than her three opponents — front-runner Ed Broadbent, the NDP's parliamentary leader since David Lewis' election defeat, and more recent candidates Lorne Nystrom, the 28-year-old MP from Yorkton-Melville, and John Harney, a defeated NDP candidate from Toronto.

She has not received the backing of Premier Barrett, a snub she declines to discuss while admitting it has hurt her badly, but she said her strength is growing and her chances of success are getting better every day.

Few people are betting on her to win the leadership in Winnipeg July 4, however, despite the interest she's sparked in an otherwise lacklustre race.

STRAY FEATHERS

If there's one thing certain about a bird's life, other than death, it's competition.

Just about everything a bird requires from its environment is limited; food, territory, singing posts, dust baths and, yes, even nest sites. And to survive, a bird must compete to win its share of these resources.

While birds are competing throughout their lives, the most obvious — to man — manifestation of avian competition reveals itself in the nesting season when intraspecific battles erupt over territorial rights. Then the spectacle of birds actually fighting for their piece of the environmental action can be seen.

So, when we think of avian competition we most often think of it in this context, birds of the same species vying for some essential component of their lives.

But birds of different species compete too, and for the same things that birds of the same species compete. Not the least of these interspecific hassles can be seen now in hundreds of back-yard battle grounds throughout Victoria. I call it the annual avian real estate shuffle.

With the prospect of raising a family imminent, finding a suitable site for the nest becomes paramount. New sites are an integral part of every bird's nesting territory; they are one of the Big Three components which a territory must provide — sufficient food, adequate cover, and a suitable nest site.

In most cases several kinds of birds can occupy the same piece of ground amicably so long as each species' individual requirements do not conflict with another's; each species occupies its own niche.

But for species that nest in natural cavities in trees, or in bird boxes, the situation is slightly different.

For example, a box built and designed for swallows, might attract two kinds of swallows as well as Starlings and House Sparrows all which would compete for the site. Leaving aside our human preferences, let's see how such problems are usually solved by the birds.

First, if the box is in a location attractive to Starlings, they'll take over. Starlings are without doubt the most pugnacious contestants in any competition for a nest box. I've seen them literally drag a Tree Swallow out of a bird box by the scruff of its neck.

So, to beat the Starling, you locate your box close to active areas around your home. Starlings don't mind people — at a distance.

But between House Sparrows and Swallows — either Violet-green or Tree — the problem is more complex. Size should not give sparrows much, if any, advantage. They are about the same size as swallows who, you'd think, could therefore meet them on equal terms in any competition for a nest site.

Unfortunatly — from a purely human point of view — sparrows have two things in their favour; they are dogged and persistent, and they're usually on the ground first. They winter here, sometimes roosting in the same boxes that become their nest sites in spring — and possession being nine points of the law even in the bird world — they're hard to evict.

Swallows, on the other hand, arrive only when the lengthening days of spring have already signalled the start of nesting activities for the sparrows. Not only that but given an even start at a new bird box, swallows show a peculiar laissez faire attitude by failing to stick with it.

And should the competition descend to the physical — it seldom does — the sparrow's dogged persistence pays off. They just take up places on the box and defy any swallow to move them.

Since sparrows tolerate people almost as well as swallows do, our only recourse is to keep dumping them and their garbage out of the box in the hope that the swallows might just get the upper hand. Which, I suppose, is just another form of competition.

PETER MURRAY - EDITOR

It's Not Your Ordinary Soap Opera

By PAT BARCLAY

My review copy of The Candy Factory was delivered by the postman in a plan brown wrapper which, considering some of the novel's contents, seems appropriate enough. But I understand that a limited number of copies were distributed decked out in fancy chocolate box packaging. This too, considering certain other contents of the novel, is more than routinely appropriate. Because The Candy Factory is essentially an old-fashioned homily for a new-fangled age, neatly arranged and cunningly displayed.

Sylvia Fraser, who wrote it, is also the author of Pandora. Her second novel is a logical extension of her first, which thrusts an impressionable child into the often shockingly corrupt everyday world. Pandora thrives and survives in spite of the evil around her because she is clever, trusting and adaptable; our world is fraught with evil, suggests Ms. Fraser, but it is also blessed with hope.

In The Candy Factory Ms. Fraser turns to the miseries of adulthood, which she sees as needlessly self-inflicted through "habit and pessimism", both of which inhibit hope: " . . . life for many people in the Candy Factory had become claustrophobic, unheroic, repetitive and purposeless, devoid of such human miracles as the power of love to change, of madness to heal, of insight to release, of intuition to perceive, of compassion to rescue."

"A human miracle in every pot" is the essence of Ms. Fraser's warcry as she girds herself for the fray, armed with a battery of literary devices ranging from pornography to stream-of-consciousness. No doubt about it, The Candy Factory is dazzling. Imagine a Dear Abby column with music, color, sound effects, the widest possible screen and fireworks at intermission, and you've imagined a rough approximation of the effect of this novel.

Style is obviously Ms. Fraser's forte. She can sound like Mordecai Richler one moment and Helen Gurley Brown the next — or like neither of them, as in this description of an old woman: "In the evenings — caustic of tongue and short on sunlight, her daily bread spread with gall and her cup running over with self-pity—she would expand her physical needs to take up as much of her daughter's time as possible, dividing each hour into pills of every hue, a bitter rainbow ending in the chamberpot . . . life slithered away from her like a ball of yarn, and the harder she pulled on it, the more it unravelled."

FRASER . . . teach and titillate

I suspect, on balance, that The Candy Factory will come to be regarded as a "woman's book". Not every woman will be able to get past its first 50 pages, it's true, and the chapter dealing with a character named Sam Ryan is unlikely to wend its excerpted way into any glossy women's magazine. Yet much of the novel occupies ground already familiar to consumers of daytime TV and pop journalism for women.

Self-help for an ailing marriage, how to get more out of life, how to love, what to do about a childhood trauma that never grew up—all these and more are examined and handled with dispatch in The Candy Factory, giving it a faintly clinical air that nevertheless intrigues. Other people's hang-ups, as any regular reader of an advice column will testify, are an endless source of fascination.

To give Ms. Fraser her due, her intention is primarily to teach, not to titillate. (The fact that she manages to work in an impressive amount of titillation on the side is beside the present point.) There are 11 characters in The Candy Factory, including two who manipulate the others towards their allotted happy endings. These two, a naive and romantic old lady and a hyperbolically depraved and cynical old tramp, represent the two poles between which man must navigate or lose his bearings.

The remaining nine characters are the factory president and his wife and nine assorted employees. In standard psychoanalytical fashion, Ms. Fraser probes their various traumas, frustrations and fantasies, demonstrating every time that "habit and pessimism" are mental blinkers which cut man off from his own potential.

All this is packaged in a story that includes an hilarious battle between a women's libber and a beauty queen contestant, a super-frank love scene, a diabolical practical joke, a bizarre funeral, and a rape with an umbrella. The Candy Factory is no ordinary soap opera. Its extravagant bubbles are in living color, and they're made with a strong dose of lye.

South Pole triumph for Amundsen

Journal Recalls Polar Heroics

By JAMES McCOOK

Reading this unemotional account of the hardships endured by six men in the Antarctic, a reviewer reflects on how much the assistance of a Canadian Eskimo would have meant to them. He would have known how to make seal-oil lamps to better heat and illuminate the snow cave in which they lived for seven months. He would have made more efficient sleds and been more skilful in the killing of seals, although the penguins would have been a novelty to him.

And yet this team of the 1910-13 British National Antarctic Expedition demands admiration for the way in which it overcame difficulties, learned to make do and, above all, maintained its spirit in the long dark while savage gales made travel impossible.

ANTARCTIC ADVENTURE: Scott's Northern Party, by Raymond E. Priestley. McClelland and Stewart. $20.

To reach the South Pole was the main purpose of the expedition led by Capt. Robert Falcon Scott, but even in 1910 scientists were made part of the personnel and studied climate, rocks and penguins. The narrator, Raymond Priestley, was a geologist and meteorologist with the Northern Party along with two Royal Navy officers and three other "comrades and friends" who won the rank of petty officer.

On Jan 26, 1911, on Victoria Land, his party said farewell to the five men who were to make the dash to the South Pole and die on the way back. The Northern Party, while examining the coastline before disembarking from the ship which had taken them from New Zealand, was amazed to find another vessel in a bay. It was there carrying the Amundsen Expedition, which was to beat Scott to the Pole.

For 10 months the six in the Priestley party had their home in a hut at Cape Adair, making journeys which taught them techniques of survival. They endured snow-blindness — from which an Eskimo would have protected them by insisting on goggles — and became proficient in sled travel.

There were hard times that first winter but they were as nothing compared to the ordeals of the second one. On Jan. 4, 1912, the supply schooner appeared to transfer the six to Terra Nova Bay where it was planned they would "geologize" for six weeks and then be picked up. But the ship did not return; ice barred the way.

The men ashore, with clothing and equipment, including light tents, designed for the mildest part of the year, had to save themselves by burrowing into the snow, making frantic hunts for seal and penguin meat they could store and were forced to remain in their sleeping bags for days on end as savage gales screamed outside their cave.

No Eskimo could have bettered their patience and good humor. Officers and men shared all duties, they celebrated birthdays with an extra mouthful of chocolate from their strictly rationed supplies, they joked about the pangs of hunger and joined in choruses — Priestley was expected to sing for two hours when it was his turn to prepare the food. Seal brains were a prize part of the menu.

When the winter had passed they stepped out from their hole in the snow and with good heart completed a march of nine weeks to rejoin other members of the expedition on Ross Island and learn that Scott had perished.

Ships That Carried an Aura of Adventure

By TORCHY ANDERSON

Back in the bad old days that some of us ancients loved, days of ships on our coast that looked like ships rather than barges with something piled on top, there was a service by beautiful ships that carried passengers between Victoria, Vancouver and Seattle in four hours and carried them in comfort and luxury that made disembarking a regret.

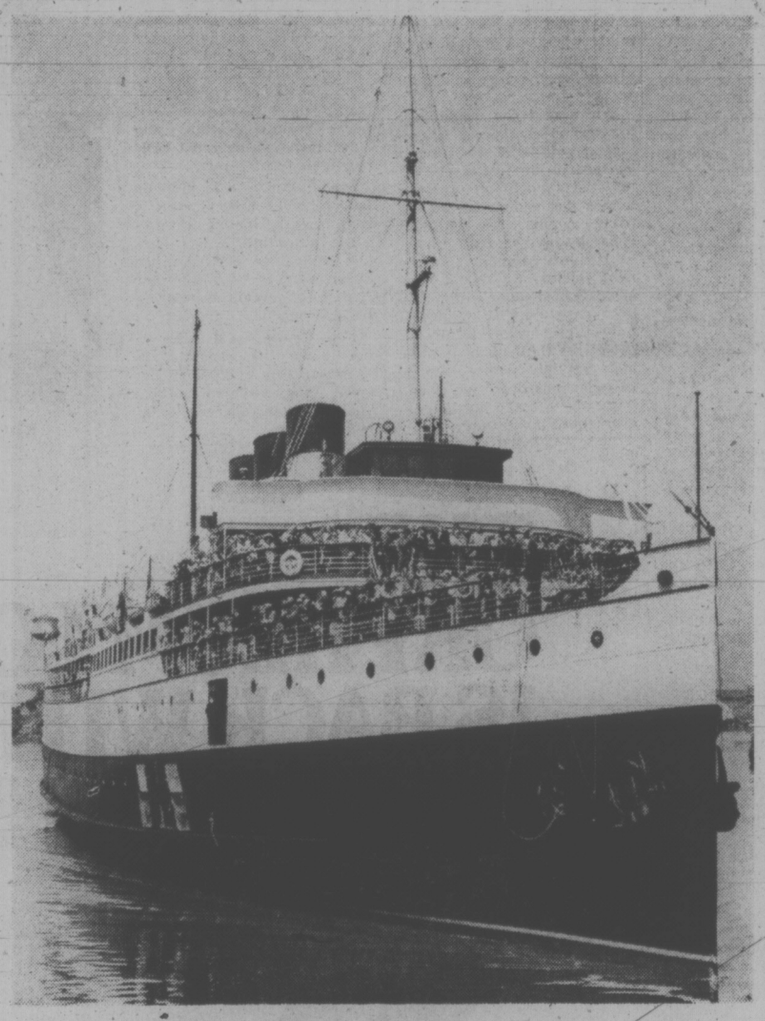
Norman Hacking, a veteran of newspaper "marine beat" with a vast knowledge of fresh and salt water history, and W. Kaye Lamb, historian and archivest, have combined abilities in this volume of great historical value.

THE PRINCESS STORY, by Norman R. Hacking and W. Kaye Lamb. Mitchell Press. $9.75.

Dr. John McLoughlin of the Hudson's Bay's Fort Vancouver, later Vancouver, Washington, was the man who put his company into steam on this coast with the historic Beaver. The story that leads from the notable little Beaver to the speed, comfort and luxury of the Victoria-Vancouver-Seattle triangle service is one of tragedy and comedy, triumph and disaster. Like others in my generation bracket I incline to wallow in nostalgia when I think of the mild excitement of midnight sailings from Vancouver and Victoria. Walking up the gangway before midnight sniffing the tang of sea air, maybe fumbling in winter fog, there was just a suggestion of adventure, no matter how often one did it.

As one who, as a small boy, was tossed out of an upper bunk when the venerable Charmer hit a violent blow in the Straits, and helped build rafts on a Gulf island in order to paddle out to breast the violent wash of the speedy Princess Victoria, I treasure this book. My only regret is that the publishers did not put it into hard cover. It is a book to keep.

The authors divided their task. Hacking handles the ancestry — 1827 to 1901, Lamb the B.C. Coastal service 1901 to 1974.



The ill-fated Princess Kathleen

In the first days of coastal steam navigation there was sometimes shooting. There were arguments with Americans and Russians. In later days Canadian Pacific ships built in Scotland were commandeered for service in two great wars.

And there were rate wars when American and Canadian ships fought for the coastal passenger service. In 1908 Joshua Green of Seattle began the war. The normal fare from Victoria to Seattle dropped from $2 to fifty cents. There used to be a story that one company threw in a meal, but that is not recorded. The Princess Victoria was the speediest ship on the coast for many years and it was her speed that eventually won the race for the CPR.

The CPR took an active part in transporting gold seekers to the rush of '89. Its northern service was struck a tragic blow in 1918 when the Princess Sophia sailed from Skagway with a capacity passenger list and was wrecked in Lynn Canal. All 343 souls aboard were lost. In 1952 the Princess Kathleen struck a rock in the same Lynn Canal. All 307 passengers and crew were landed before the big ship slipped off a ledge into deep water. Salvage was considered impossible.

Quite properly the authors have confined their text to the ascertainable record. It was not their scope to go into the place the old Victoria-Vancouver service played in British Columbia politics. With the heavy traffic of politicians — not to mention statesmen — between these points it was natural that deals were made and strategy pondered.

Take a night sailing from Vancouver on the eve of a new legislative session. You found the greatest imaginable gathering of political big-shots and would-be big-shots, along with their laughing ladies agog with gossip and their suitcases crammed with new frocks.

The night boats were "dry" but the passengers brought their own supply. By the time the ship whistled at the entrance of Active Pass many new political ambition had been kindled, many a dream shattered.

The night boats afforded fun and games and hangovers.

Where Wolves Run Free and the Air Is Clean

By LYN HANCOCK

My father, you have spoken well;
you have told me that Heaven is very beautiful;
tell me now one more thing.
Is it more beautiful than the country of the muskox in summer, where sometimes the mist blows over the lakes, and sometimes
and the loons cry very often?

The Arctic?

To the pragmatic Indian or Eskimo it is Nunassiaq, the beautiful land; to the panic-stricken explorer jammed into the ice pack it is a monotonous, snow-covered waste, vast and desolate.

THE ARCTIC, by Fred Bruemmer. Prentice-Hall. $29.95.

To Fred Bruemmer it is "neither the eternally frozen wastelands of popular fancy, nor the genial paradise painted nowadays by some romantic conservationists who obviously haven't been bitten by enough mosquitoes or spent a winter there."

To those who read his latest book on this land, the Arctic is all these and more. It is our last great wilderness, "a place where wolves run free, a place where water is pure and the air is clear, a place where one can be alone, a place where nature is still master and where we can feel awe in her might." The Arctic is beauty in immensity — men and dogs travelling over the infinity of a frozen sea, a lone kayak beneath an overpowering mountain of ice.

And the book both in photography and design captures it well. Tones are skilfully contrasted — stark black and white for fall and winter, clear vibrant color for spring and summer. Pictures are spread two feet wide and you need two hands to hold them.

They portray facts, but even more so, feelings. A single white poppy lifting its petals to the light against a blackened background evokes dramatic simplicity; loneliness, the urge to survive.

The book is also immense in its scope both in space, covering not only Canada's north but Siberia, Alaska, Greenland and Scandinavia, and in time, spanning more than 20 centuries from the ancient Greeks to present day oil riggers. It covers the land, the sea, the plants, the animals and the people.

Bruemmer presents his theme throughout, a lesson we have heard many times before, but he has expressed it with urgency and immediacy.

"We, the invaders, want to rebuild the Arctic land; we came to it as strangers, we reside in it as strangers and we dream of the day when we can dome over its villages and cities with plastic, so that we can isolate ourselves from its reality and dwell in it as strangers forever. We covet its wealth and some day when we are finished we may have destroyed beyond recall its harsh and ancient harmony."

Muskox graze on the tundra

The native people of the north developed a culture in harmony with the land. They lived at peace with nature and the land. The white man's attitude to the Arctic was diametrically opposed to that of the natives. He came to conquer and subdue, first the enormous animal wealth and then, armed with his technology that enabled him to brush aside the ancient law of the land, to take out its mineral wealth.

As well as immense, the Arctic is timeless. Growth and decay are exceedingly slow. The wooden slabs marking the graves of members of the Franklin expedition are as sound as when erected in 1846. Cart tracks left by Sir Edward Parry's expedition in 1820 are still clearly visible. Only specks of lichen and moss have grown in the trenches excavated by Sir Martin Frobisher's men in their search for gold in 1578. One pass of a bulldozer in the Mackenzie River Valley became in four years a gully 23 feet wide and eight feet deep. Fred Bruemmer says what we have heard before but says it with clarity, dramatic pungency, a mixture of the poetic and the prosaic, even humor: "A crevasse is a thing of beauty, provided you don't fall in."

He repeats Stefansson's famous saying that the Arctic is "lifeless except for millions of caribou and foxes, tens of thousands of wolves and muskoxen, thousands of polar bears, millions of birds and billions of insects." But he warns that even in Stefansson's time, before three centuries of rapine had devastated the Arctic seas, such a remark is misleading. Caribou may be reckoned in acres or square miles but only if you see them in the midst of a major migration. From a standpoint 100 miles to the east or west the observer may be convinced that caribou are rare. Seasonal agglomeration of some arctic animals in certain areas have led in the past to greatly exaggerated estimates of animal numbers and to their ruthless slaughter once it had been determined where and when they congregated. The history, the geography, the biology of the land is further enlivened when Bruemmer describes the times in more than 13 years of wanderings when he has lived with the native people.

"I usually come unannounced and uninvited yet they put me up and put up with me for weeks and often for months and they took me along on hundreds of trips where I was rarely an asset and often no doubt, a nuisance."

Read The Arctic — a book as grand in its production and its photography as it is in its theme.

New Tracking Equipment To Aid Greenpeace Mission

WINTER HARBOR (CP) — The Greenpeace V arrived in this small Quatsino Sound community Friday after being fitted with new tracking equipment in Tofino.

Two electronic specialists were flown to the craft Wednesday to bring aboard extra radio directional finders and an additional automatic loran that will pinpoint the position of Japanese and Russian whaling fleets.

Project Ahab, sponsored by the greenpeace foundation and its supporters around the world, will attempt to harass the whaling fleets and draw world attention to the annual killing of the "endangered species."

Dr. Myron MacDonald, an electronics adviser and crew member of the Greenpeace V, said Friday that with the added equipment "it will be possible for us to triangulate the position of the whalers using the spare RDF here in Winter Harbor." He said once a signal is received and the machines are turned on "the rest is automatic."

Dr. MacDonald said the extra equipment was brought in when the Greenpeace crew learned that the Japanese fleet has been instructed to avoid confrontation with the Greenpeace.

"Even though the Japanese say they intend to avoid us, they can't keep hopping around forever," said Greenpeace crew member Paul Watson of Vancouver.

Two years of research by Greenpeace director Dr. Paul Spong and other concerned scientists have given the Greenpeace foundation a thorough working knowledge of both the migration patterns of the whales and the hunting patterns of the whalers.

Watson, a professional seaman who will operate the inflatable boats that will take up positions between the threatened whale and the harpooner, said Project Ahab will broadcast sounds the whales have never heard before to attract the mammals to the project's boats.

"It means that for thousands of miles around the whales will be able to hear us," said Watson. "If they start coming to us in significant numbers, we should be able to protect them if the whalers really mean that they want to avoid us.

The sister ship Greenpeace III is en route to Winter Harbor via the inside passage.

CHILD THEFT CASE WAITS

POMONA, Calif. (AP) — Sentencing of a Victoria man who pleaded guilty to child stealing was postponed Friday to give the court time to determine if he is mentally disturbed.

Richard J. Turley, 22, pleaded guilty last month to one charge of child stealing in connection with the Feb. 1 abduction of Edward Iris, 11, of nearby Valinda. The boy was recovered in good condition.

Crash Kills 3

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — Three young men died Friday when their car crashed near Tofino.

The three were identified as Roderick Charles McKenzie, 20, John Michael Stone, 20, and Lawrence David Bond, 18, all of Tofino.

Police said McKenzie was the driver of a convertible which apparently went out of control on a bend in the road, smashed into a tree and rolled over.

Rail Study Planned

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Recreation Minister Jack Radford announced today a joint agreement with the B.C. Railway to conduct an environmental study along the Dease Lake extension north of Fort St. James.

He told a B.C. Wildlife Federation conference that the study, conducted by an independent environmental consultant, will form the basis for decisions on both restorative work in the area and protective measures to be taken in further construciton.

The minister said concern expressed by Fish and Wildlife Branch staff about fish and wildlife values damaged by rail construction prompted a tour of the area by Alf Nunweiler, minister without portfolio responsible for northern affairs, and branch staff.

The decision to conduct the environmental impact study was made following a meeting with senior B.C. Railway staff, he said.

Radford said it was also agreed to employ a professional monitor to advise contractors working on the rail extension on environmental problems and to act as liaison between the department of recreation and conservation and B.C. Rail during the remainder of construction.

Construction of the extension began in 1970 with completion expected in 1976, although there are indications completion will be delayed at least a year. The track is being laid in two section running north from Fort St. James and South from Dease Lake and is within 40 miles of connecting.

Construction of the extension has been criticized since 1970 when the Bulkely-Nechako regional district learned that 25 miles of the line was being built next to the shore of Takla Lake, crossing several Park reserves.

Marijuana Cases Adjourned

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two cases in which marijuana legislation is being challenged on grounds that there is more than the one species of cannabis noted in the Narcotic Control Act have been adjourned until later this month.

Judge Lee Skipp adjourned to May 16 the case of three men charged in county court here with possession of 50 pounds of marijuana in 1973 for the purpose of trafficking.

Charged are James Michael Spanks, 27, Stanley Victor Herber, 25, and Michael Charles Coombs, 31, all of Vancouver.

Crown counsel W. B. Scarth Jr. was successful in an application to call rebuttal evidence through Dr. Ernest Small, a Canadian department of agriculture expert on marijuana, who disagrees with arguments put forward by other botanists that there are two other species of cannabis than the variety Sativa L. named in the legislation.

In New Westminster county court, Judge D. E. McTaggart has adjourned until May 22 the case of two Americans, Gary Wilbanks and William Perry, both of Seattle, who are charged with having imported 56 pounds of marijuana into Canada last July.

Defence counsel Patrick Good has called similar botanical evidence in that case.

A 90-man U.S. army infantry company from Alaska and a U.S. National Guard military intelligence company from Oregon will be taking part in the exercise.

Troops taking part from Calgary belong to No. 1 Combat Group, Lord Strathcona's Horse (Royal Canadians) armored reconnaissance regiment, 1 Combat Group Signals Squadron, 1st Battalion, PPCLIs, I Tactical Air Control Unit, I Service Battalion and I Field Ambulance.

Other units taking part are the 2nd. Battalion, PPCLI of Winnipeg, 3rd. Regiment, Royal Canadian Horse Artillery of Shilo, Man.; 3rd. Brig.-Gen. Phillip Neatby, commander I Combat Group is in charge of the exercise which will include helicopter assaults, aerial resupply and medical evacuation techniques, assault river crossing, patrolling and night operations.

A six-day non-stop tactical battle to test combat techniques will end the exercise with the troops leaving for their home bases June 14.

Energy Chiefs on U.S. Junket

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The state department here is paying the cost of a week-long junket for five Canadian federal and provincial government officials, including James Rhodes, chairman of the British Columbia Petroleum Corporation.

The five are all in energy-related jobs and were selected and invited by the Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs in the state department.

The state department is paying the full cost of their travel and accommodation.

"The thrust of this is to let them ask about what's being done here, the thinking here about the future and research projects," said an official associated with the government agency which planned the program for the Canadian visitors.

The official said the Canadians were here in a "professional not official" capacity but they discussed energy and resource issues with U.S. government and private agencies.

Besides Rhodes, the party includes Real Boucher, director-general for energy in the Quebec resources department; John French, co-ordinator of resources for the Nova Scotia Energy Council; Robert Hutchinson, a senior adviser in the federal energy, mines and resources department and Gordon Jewett, executive-director of the Ontario division of mines.

The state department has funded previous visits by groups of Canadian journalists, drug abuse officials, MPs and young political workers. But this is the first program for energy officials.

Energy matters, including exports of oil, gas and coal, currently rank at the top of issues in Canada-U.S. relations.

The group arrived in Washington last Sunday, but there was no public announcement by the Canadian Embassy and press coverage was not invited.

The five met officials of the fuels and energy division of the state department, the Energy Research and Development Agency and the interior department's Bureau of Mines. They were guests at a Canadian Embassy lunch and also met members of Congress, including Al Ullman, chairman of the ways and means committee of the House of Representatives, which is playing a key role in drafting U.S. energy legislation.

On Thursday, the group flew to Pittsburgh for meetings with executives of corporations, including Gulf Oil and U.S. Steel.

The visitors were to fly back to Canada today.

Farmers To Get Grant Hike

The limit on provincial government loans or grants to farmers in B.C. would be increased to $50 million from $20 million under legislation introduced in the legislature Friday.

Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich said the Farm Products Industry Improvement Amendement Act increases the amount of aid to enable producer-owned organizations to invest in food processing enterprises.

Under the bill the agriculture minister could make loans, guarantee loans or make grant to producer owned organizations, including those who invest outside B.C.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

One woman was sent to jail and another placed on probation Friday for stealing $1,109 from an elderly Chinese-Canadian last September.

Lea Crowley, 22, and Sharon Margaret Lawson, 20, addresses not known, appeared before Judge William Ostler for sentencing in connection with the incident.

The charge was laid after an 82-year-old man reported two women had accosted him in the 500 block Fisgard, grabbed a roll of money he was carrying and fled.

Ostler sentenced Crowley to three months in jail followed by two years probation. He indicated he was considering a six-month term but took into consideration the fact she has been in jail since early February awaiting trial on the charge.

He said Lawson's participation in the theft was minimal and for that reason suspended sentence and placed her on two years probation.

He also fined Lawson $250 after she pleaded guilty to false pretence in cashing a $45 cheque in a Victoria store last Sept. 8.

Linda Lenore Robinson picked the wrong place to utter a stolen cheque Monday.

She went to the store where the cheque owner worked to try to cash it.

Mrs. Robinson, 24, of 2310 Quadra pleaded guilty when she appeared before Judge Harold Alder who remanded her to May 23 for a pre-sentence report.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett said the accused told police she had taken four pieces of identification and six cheques from an apartment where they both lived April 25.

Three days later she took one of the cheques to Canada Safeway, 1644 Hillside, but the employee she presented it to recognized the name and phoned police.

Randy Charles Collette, 19, of 455 Boleskine was only trying to demonstrate a karate kick when he booted at a large plate glass window in the B.C. Telephone building, on Johnson early Friday morning. But the window broke. And now he has to pay for its replacement.

In court Collette pleaded guilty to wilful damage.

Judge Harold Alder placed him on six months probation, a condition of which was to pay $335 compensation to B.C. Tel.

Charles Earle Leard, 22, of 3159 Shelbourne and Kenneth Ray Wellburn, 23, of 3789 Quadra were remanded to May 23 for presentence report after pleading guilty to possession of marijuana for the purposes of trafficking.

The pair was charged Jan. 10 after Saanich police stopped their car on Tattersall and discovered Wellburn was carrying two ounces of marijuana in two separate baggies and Leard one ounce.

Subsequent investigation resulted in the seizure of eight separate one ounce baggies from Leard's home and six baggies from Wellburn's.

They admitted to police they had just purchased one pound of marijuana and were going to sell it.

Defence counsel noted they didn't get very far with their enterprise. "The inventory was seized before they could get it on the street."

Both men are free on bail.

Ronald Joseph Thomas, 26, and Margaret Kwasnicki, 25, both of 139 Menzies elected trial by county court judge alone on a charge of possession of marijuana April 10 for the purposes of trafficking. A preliminary hearing was set to begin July 3.

Gordon Melvin Kerr, 69, of 310 St. James was fined $125 by Alder after pleading guilty to shoplifting $10.98 worth of goods from Shoppers Drug, 3190 Shelbourne Tuesday. Birkett noted the accused had more than $200 cash on him at the time of his arrest.

ATOMIC CLOCK FOR PERFECT TIMING

OTTAWA (CP)—At precisely 11 a.m. Thursday the National Research Council started what it says is "the most accurate and stable clock in the world."

Scientists predict it will lose or gain no more than three seconds during the coming one million years.

Cecil Costain, head of the research council's time and frequency section, such accuracy is needed for navigation systems and some computer operations. Scientists, particularly radio astronomers, often need the exact time, which is measured down to about one-millionth of a second.

It is an atomic clock, so named because vibrations of an atom are used to measure the frequency of time. This one uses vibrations in atoms of cesium, a rare metallic powder like sodium and which is used commercially in some industrial cleaning substances.

The correct time is given on a digital dial, which is run by electricity, Dr. Costain said. Anyone wanting the correct time from the national research council can get it for only the cost of a telephone call and a special clock costing more than $3,000.

The receiving clock must be able to communicate over the telephone with the research council's clock.

The seconds are measured off in beeps and the clock calling in has to be able to record the steady tone and the beeps and translate these frequencies into the correct time.

"It sounds like a strangulated canary," Dr. Costain said.

More Doctors Needed—Grit

Pat McGeer (L-Vancouver-Point Grey) asked Education Minister Eileen Dailly Friday when the provincial government intends to take action to provide more facilities for graduating doctors.

He said during debate on the education department's spending estimates, that no more than 80 doctors a year are graduating from the University of British Columbia medical school.

The school is turning away about 500 applicants a year, he added, and the province is licensing about 300 doctors a year.

Dr. McGeer asked Dailly if the government was planning to establish another medical school at the University of Victoria.

The minister said there were no such plans for UVic and that it was a lack of clinical facilities that is delaying expansion of the medical school facilities.

MUSEUM SUBSIDY TOO HIGH—BAWLF

City alderman Sam Bawlf said today the amount of subsidization given the Maritime Museum by Victoria is too high.

He added the Law Courts building in Bastion Square, which the city wants the museum to vacate, could be used for better purposes.

In rebuttal to museum officials' accusations that the city has not informed them of their plans, Bawlf said council had made it quite clear it wanted the museum relocated elsewhere.

He said the building could bring $100,000 annually if rented to commercial interests, plus an additional $10,000 in taxes.

"It's a question of whether a subsidy of this magnitude is warranted," he said, "Thirty-thousand-odd people visiting the museum last year isn't exactly setting the world afire. The Provincial Museum has 20,000 a day."

Bawlf said subsidizing of the museum should primarily be a provincial government concern.

"It's a provincial collection and should be the responsibility of all the people of the province, not subsidized by 60,000 to 65,000," he said.

Labor Unrest In Winnipeg

WINNIPEG (CP) — Labor unrest increased in Winnipeg this week with 1,500 carpenters and sheet metal workers going on strike, raising the possibility of a general strike by the building trades.

The United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners and the Sheet Metal Workers Union voted Wednesday to reject the latest contract offers from the Winnipeg Builders' Exchange.

Kamil Gajdosik, chairman of the multi-trades workers' negotiating committee, representing seven other unions, said Thursday they may strike if there is no progress in negotiations with the Labor Relations Council, representing the builders' exchange.

He said meetings between now and Monday will decide the positions of about 1,300 workers represented by the Laborers International Union and the Bricklayers and Masons Union.

"The present indications are it will be a general strike of all unions that haven't signed an agreement yet."

Even if the unions in the multi-trades agreement do not favor strike, the construction industry in Winnipeg may be shut down by carpenters' and sheet metal workers' pickets.

The carpenters set up picket lines at three sites Thursday and pickets were expected to be at all major construction sites in the city today.

The latest contract offers by the builders provided salary increases of 42.5 per cent over two years. That would have put the carpenters' hourly wages at about $9 while raising the hourly pay for sheet metal workers, including certain benefits, over the $10 mark.

Both pnions insist money is not the key issue. They say they do not want to be involved in the multi-trades agreement that the other unions abide by.

City Elderly—Prayed For, or Preyed On?

By HOI-YIN DER
Times Staff

Elderly Victoria residents appear to be the target of appeals for funds from possibly dubious religious organizations, according to an investigation by the Victoria Times.

The appeals are from groups not registered in British Columbia. Some of them are in the United States but are using Canadian post office boxes. They appear vague as to the use to which donations will be put.

According to John Hanrahan, president of the Victoria Rest Homes Association, it's not hard for appeal operators to get the names and addresses of elderly prospective donors.

"For example, many elderly spinsters will insist on having Miss placed before their names in telephone directories and on their door buzzers."

But he claimed he had never heard of this type of solicitation taking place in rest homes because the residents are well protected.

Other rest home administrators agree that their residents "just don't receive this type of mail."

But when asked how they would know from whom residents receive letters, the general reply they gave was that they "just know."

However, several letters of solicitation have been obtained from residents of rest homes, and contrary to the view taken by rest home administrators, some patients and nurses have said solicitation of funds by religious organizations is common.

One nurse, who prefers to remain anonymous, said many of the elderly cannot afford to contribute to these appeals but do so anyway.

"The main reason is that they are afraid to be left out of the glory of God," she said.

A great deal of this type of appeal for funds is also aimed at older people living on their own.

Although none of the men interviewed at the Senior Citizens' Activity Centre on Centennial Square said they receive mail from religious organizers, many of the elderly women said they often get letters requesting donations and that they do contribute "a dollar or two" when able.

Letters received from C. W. Burpo of the Bible Institute of the Air in Arizona and from Don Gessett of Bold Bible Missions in Surrey illustrate the appeals.

Burpo begins his letter by telling his "dear Canadian friends" the nation is in "deep recession." He says that although this is "manifested" in his mail, he does not want to push any of his "precious radio family" to support him.

Yet Burpo concludes the letter by telling the reader the institute is barely scraping by financially.

"This is the truth and I know that you believe me when I tell you. In addition to radio expense, we have the expense of books, records, tapes, postage, secretarial help, etc."

"This is all! I just wanted you to know how we are getting along and again, I wanted you to know that God and I both love you."

Gossett writes of a woman (whose name is never disclosed) who "had never been able to accept the Blood of Jesus" and was dying of cancer.

But when he "shared the message of the precious blood," she grasped the truth and was made "every whit whole", a fact which, says Gossett, was confirmed by the Cancer Clinic (which he doesn't identify).

Gossett then rhetorically asks whether the recipient of this letter can be "healed by the bleeding stripes of Jesus."

"Oh yes indeed," Gossett says, "By His stripes, you are healed! Confess it and possess it."

Enclosed with the letter is a blank cheque made payable to the Don Gossett Crusade at a Surrey post office box number.

The woman who received this letter is a patient in a local rest home. She is lame, but sent a donation to Gossett and believes that through his prayers she will walk again.

The Times has been unable to contact Gossett or the Bold Bible Mission. Neither Gossett nor the mission has a listing in the telephone directory and the mission is not registered with the registrar of companies.

"While most charitable organizations do register with us, it is not compulsory that they do so," said registrar of companies M. A. Jorre de St. Jorre.

"On the surface it looks like a real con game," said Bill Tindall, executive vice president of the Better Business Bureau, who has been investigating Gossett and the mission.

"If funds were put to legitimate use, there should be no hesitation in making known the proper place of business . . . using only a post office box number, it would appear there was something to conceal," he said.

Tindall said it is also unusual for charitable organizations not register with the registrar of comapnies, which would allow donors to claim exemptions on their income tax returns.

"But there's not much we can do at this moment other than to warn people to not get involved," he said.

Inspector William Kay of the post office security investigations division in Vancouver said there is no specific legislation that would prohibit solicitation by mail.

"There is nothing the post office can do because we have no right to intrude into somebody else's mail," he said.

But even if the Bible mission is a legitimate society, little can be done to stop it from asking for donations.

Corporal Steve Holotuck of the RCMP commercial fraud squad said as long as there is no fraud involved, the fraud squad is unable to act.

Director of trade practices, Michael Hanson, said he doesn't know of any legislation to protect the public against operations of this kind and doubts there will ever be.

"I suspect much of the money from these appeals goes into the pockets of the organizers, but once you get into the area of quasi-religion, the politicians keep their hands off," Hanson said.

Liquor Licence Laws Enforced

The general manager of the provincial Liquor Administration Branch said in Victoria today that a directive has gone out to all of about 3,200 licensed outlets in B.C. on enforcement of regulations.

V. C. Woodland said the memo from his office is not pointing the finger at any particular premises at this point and is prompted partly by the onset of longer daylight evenings and the increased business it brings to the outlets.

"The operation of your establishment is a matter of concern to this department and to the community in which you operate," his memo says in part.

"I'm especially concerned with over-service, over-crowding, rowdyism, boisterous conduct and service to minors. Every precaution should be taken by you and-or by staff to see such incidents do not take place."

Woodland said there have been no particular problems in Greater Victoria at this time.

In an interview earlier he said the branch will certainly be watching what takes place in Nanaimo, where a number of juveniles were apprehended last month in a series of RCMP raids on beer parlors. One RCMP officer described an Nanaimo pub as looking "like a junior high school cafeteria."

Ask The Times

Q. Is there a local club interested in bonsai — the art of growing miniature trees or do you know an experienced person who could give me advice on the subject? D.M.

A. There is no bonsai club in Victoria now but the Vancouver Island Rock and Alpine Society has several members who are bonsai enthusiasts. Mrs. Ed. Lohbrunner, 1101 Lohbrunner, is a collector and an authority on the subject.

Barbara and Peter Watson with children on Rahngild in the Inner Harbor

SHIPWRECK DIDN'T KILL DREAM

It will be their second stab at sailing around the world when Peter and Barbara Watson leave the Inner Harbour this summer in their 40-foot ketch Rahngild.

They're hoping for a happier ending to this saga.

The last one ended in shipwreck.

Watson hails from Kingston, Jamaica, and took three and a half years to build Rahngild at Coal Harbour on the mainland.

He first came to Canada in 1960, "doing all the various jobs people from the West Indies do when they arrive in Canada."

He and his wife met and married in Toronto, coming west as soon as they could to fulfil their dream of owning a boat and sailing around the world.

Rahngild is a day-by-day reminder of their first attempt to sail the seven seas for, along with new gear, she's also fitted out with lots of the equipment that was aboard the Watsons' 36-foot cutter Deep Water, which they bought in New York.

"We got as far as the Bahamas in Deep Water and hit a reef and lost her," Watson explained. "There was no insurance but we salvaged everything and shipped it all the way back to Canada. It was having three crates of mast, rigging and other gear, as well as 10 bags of sails that made me decide to build a boat to put it on."

Luckily, Watson added, they had no children at the time of the shipwreck.

When they set out again this summer their three-year-old daughter Jada-Lee and 19-month-old son Adam will be rounding out the ship's company.

Named after a Danish princess in honor of the Danish background of Watson's mother, the Rahngild is built for offshore sailing.

Her auxiliary diesel engine has a range of 1,000 miles when her 250-gallon fuel tank is filled. She can also carry 250 gallons of water.

Her skipper, too, feels he's more than ready this time around.

"This is the third large boat over 30 feet that I've had," Watson said. "This time we're going to make it."

Special Meet For Centre

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Construction of the proposed activity centre for the handicapped on Darwin Avenue in Saanich could start next week in spite of the fact only half the money needed to build, furnish and landscape is available.

Saanich council has called a special public hearing for Monday to study and, probably, approve a land-use contract for the project.

If the land-use contract is approved a spokesman for Farmer Construction Ltd., contractors for the centre, said construction would start within days. The land has already been cleared.

Floyd Fairclough, president of the Greater Victoria Activity Centre for the Handicapped's board of directors, says the decision to go ahead has been made necessary by the inflation spiral.

"It's now or never," Fairclough said. "You have to add $120,000 each year you wait to meet inflation costs."

Plans for the centre, which will be close to the Battin-Fielding housing complex on Vernon, were first mulled over in 1968 and Fairclough said starting the centre now, even if it has to remain an empty shell for a while, will be an indication to the public that the directors mean business.

He said estimated costs of the centre had skyrocketed by 46 per cent since the original estimate was given because of increases in labor and material costs.

He said it will cost about $1.5 million to finish the two-storey building, furnish it, install an elevator and landscape the grounds.

Of the $755,000 donated toward the centre, the board has already paid out $89,893 for the purchase of the site from Saanich.

The Community Chest of Greater Victoria has designated $100,000 of its legacy funds for the centre but under conditions that make it impossible to receive the money now.

One of the conditions is the $100,000 not be given until the total cost of the project is fundable. Others are that the Community Chest have the right to occupy up to 2,000 square feet of the building and that the name of the building be identified with the Chest.

The provincial government has given $300,000 toward the centre and Fairclough said he has written Human Resources Minister Norman Levi asking the grant be increased in proportion to spiralling construction costs.

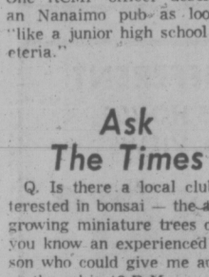
The letter was followed up with several phone calls to the minister's department, the last three of which were never answered.

Fairclough said he was notified in January that the request was also being studied by Health Minister Dennis Cocke and Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall.

Fairclough said Saanich has sold the land at a very reasonable cost in order to help the centre get started and that Farmer Construction was also prepared to co-operate.

"They (Farmer Construction) have agreed to carry financing at a minimal interest rate, less than the banks, for up to $75,000 or $100,000," he said.

'Fishy Deal' Was Labelled Progress



max low

For a man's house is his castle, said Sir Edward Coke back in the 17th century.

And a sad man from Latvia knows in the 20th century just what the learnd judge meant.

Voldemars Melderis has found out just how shattering it can be for a man to lose his castle — and the six acres that went with it.

Just over six years ago in Port Alberni, Voldemars lived happily with his wife and three children and his horse and his dog on a piece of park-like property that boasted a sparkling new home. A tailor of the old school, an artist in cloth who like many scorns the products of the big firms, Melderis worked hard for 13 years building up his own business.

Today, all that happiness is gone from the life of Voldemars Melderis.

Dejected, he sits alone in the dingy basement of a rather ghastly red, white and blue house in James Bay, living on Mincome and doing a few tailoring repairs for friends on a battered old sewing machine. The family has split up; the horse was sold; the dog put to sleep. The six acres lie empty in Port Alberni. The house is gone and bulldozers have ripped out fruit trees and lawns and submerged years of tender care.

And all in the name of progress.

Perhaps no one really is to blame. Maybe it was all above board. But it just seems a great shame that this kind of thing continues to happen. And a man can lose everything and we forgive it for hallowed progress.

Plagued by the repeated flooding of Kitsuksis Creek, which meanders through the property, the B.C. government (then under Socred W. A. C. Bennett) highways department purchased the six acres and house and outbuildings all for $18,000.

Melderis feels they tricked him. They did, he says "a very fishy, crooked deal which I will never forget in my lifetime, nor will my family."

Work crews, he says, kept their operations secret, driving on his property without permission, "blazing a trail through the bush, cutting small tree branches, drilling for earth samples and putting surveying sticks with red Khrushchev ribbons on them up to within seven feet of the doorstep."

The highways department wanted to dike the river and put in a small road alongside the dike. But Melderis argued with them that it wasn't necessary to acquire the land so near to his house and stressed that the dike could be built some 50 feet from the house. And if that was so, he and his family could remain there.

But Melderis says he was told that wasn't so. All the land was needed. He would have to get out. He was "forced" to sell, he says. As far as he is concerned, his land was expropriated.

VOLDEMARS MELDERIS . . . a fishy, crooked deal.

Now, six years later, Voldemars can't understand why the house was moved, the lawns and trees all bulldozed out and the dike has been put, just as he, in fact, suggested, a good 50 feet from where now only the foundations of the house remain.

In an emotion-filled letter written in shaky English and bitterly critical of the Bennett government, Melderis has asked Premier Barrett, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald, Highways Minister Graham Lea and Opposition leader Bill Bennett to help him "in this special inquiry."

So far, he has received a letter signed by Barrett saying it was being sent on to Lea and that "you will be hearing from him." And he has received a card from the attorney-general's department acknowledging the letter.

But I doubt very much if there will be the "special inquiry" Voldemars thinks of. To the highways department it's just another one of those letters. They get them frequently, a spokesman says, particularly when land values go up and particularly when a government changes and "everyone wants to claim the previous government screwed them."

Why the land was marked right up to the house but hasn't been used yet, the spokesman explains, is in case of future development. The highways department always acquires more access than it needs immediately so roads can be widened later, he adds. And, says the spokesman, Melderis didn't have to get off the land. "We made an offer and he accpted," he claims.

"Baloney!" says Melderis. "I had to get out all right."

What he wants is the land they are not using for the diking project to be returned to him or to be compensated more in line with the property's true value. He feels he was paid only about a third of what it was worth.

"The things Bennett and Gaglardi did and called it progress were terrible," Melderis says. "They just went ahead and didn't look into things."

If anyone had wanted to pull "a very fishy, crooked deal" then Voldemars Melderis certainly seems an ideal victim.

Once an animal trainer for zoos in Latvia, Germany and several other European countries, he is now a silver-haired but burly, fit-looking 63. And he stays that way by riding his old bicycle all over the city and walking in the sun along the beach. He is a Canadian citizen and has been here 19 years. But you wouldn't think so by his English.

He has that old-world charm and manners. But he is gullible.

When you put away your camera and close your notebook, Voldemars looks a little dubious suddenly. He hasn't been to a lawyer, because he can't afford one. And it seems kind of sad when he says:

"Will this story and photo cost me anything? Because I can't afford to pay for that either . . ."

Growing Crisis in Talent

By V. H. FULCHER,
P. S. Ross & Partners

Report of critical manpower shortages continuing to plague employers across Canada present a sharp contradiction to the rising level of unemployment, especially in relation to trades and labor occupations. The impression is created, because of the sizable number of people in this category, that the effects of recession, particularly layoffs, are peculiar to this section of the population. But this is not the case.

Professional, supervisory and management occupations, as well as the growing variety of non-organized white collar spcialists, are also affected by conditions of recession. The vital difference between these two groups is that the supply of well qualified white collar workers is steadily declining in relation to the need. Even under today's circumstances there is a growing shortage of talent, particularly in engineering, finance, general management and administration.

Because of their fewer numbers there is much less publicity about this silent minority. But the implications of their growing scarcity are much more severe for the economy.

This situation has developed for some of the following reasons:

— The increasing complexity of business and industrial processes has rendered knowledge and skills obsolete faster than ever before. Advancements in technology and management sciences demand more sophisticated knowledge and greater intelligence; fewer people have the capacity to meet these requirements.

— The values of people are changing. "Life-style" takes precedence over career considerations, particularly in business and industry.

— There is less desire to make long term commitments — a life-time career is unthinkable. And these values are not peculiar by any means to the younger generation; they are catching on increasingly with the middle aged.

— There is a growing disinclination towards the corporate "Way of life". This usually means unwillingness to bear the heavy responsibilities and decisions of higher management. Instead of the corporate "Way of life" there is a popular trend favoring employment in small to medium size businesses offering potential ownership equity, the mirage of greater freedom in working conditions and the exercise of individual styles — doing one's own thing. Because of tax advantages, many capable people are also turning to operating their own small businesses.

— Disparity is growing in earnings between professional and management positions and the trades and labor vocations. The traditional gap in such earnings has steadily narrowed and in many cases trades have overtaken the earnings of non-organized higher skill occupations. As a result, the level of reward in many non-organized positions is being seen as not commensurate with the degree of responsibility, accountability and commitment requirement.

— Although there has been an increase in recent years in budgets, and time availability for educational and training programs, only the largest companies can afford the sizeable outlay in time and funds to update professional, technical and management people and prepare them for advancement. The higher the skill and level of responsibility, the more time and investment are required. In general, the most effective and productive avenue for development of people "on the job" has not caught on; it takes planning and time to develop talent.

— In the late 1950's and early 1960's large numbers of young people turned away from industrial and business occupations in favor of government and social services and the field of education. Many opted for the "hippy" life, world travel and casual employment. Unemployment insurance and welfare became an acceptable means of livelihood. In recent years many of this "lost generation" have turned to industrial and business employment, having found disillusionment from other pursuits. However, the time gap has been to their detriment as they now do not bring to their new fields of endeavor the necesssary qualifications and corresponding level of competence which they could have possessed had they not "opted out".

— The historical and much publicized loss of Canalian talent to the U.S.A. abated somewhat in the 1960's and there were indications in the early 1970's of a reversal of this long established trend. This condition is now declining, however, mainly because of the higher cost of living in many areas of Canada and especially due to much higher income taxes.

The sum of these conditions means that the task of attracting, selecting, motivating and retaining professional and managerial people and also technical and staff specialists, has become increasingly complex, time consuming and costly. The expertise required in locating, interviewing and selecting well qualfied people involves substantial experience and specialized training in human relations, psychology and communication skills. Even large organizations with sizeable personnel departments are faced with expanding staffs and budgets for upgrading competence to meet the growing crisis in the recruitment of available white collar talent.

In the face of such pressure, companies would be wise to re-examine their manpower policies. Either they need additional internal expertise to plan for organizational growth or they may have to consider increased outside assistance to ensure that they have their share of high potential managerial capability.

MANAGEMENT MEMO

CANADIAN URANIUM COSTLY

TOKYO (CP) — Japan's $2.1-million uranium exploration investment in Canada has proved to be unprofitable because of high production costs, informed Japanese sources said today.

A consortium of seven Japanese companies and Canada's Kerr McGee Corp. has been engaged jointly in the exploration project in the Elliot Lake area of northern Ontario since 1968.

The sources said that studies on the quality and deposits of uranium concentrates and possible production costs have shown that there are no commercial merits in continuing the exploration.

Coal Sales Cut Debts

VANCOUVER (CP) — Kaiser Resources Ltd. said in its annual report that it has sold thermal coal in Europe and reduced its debt by half during 1974.

The company said it paid off $17.3 million of its long-term debt ahead of its normal maturity. The payment, along with normal payments, reduced the debt to $28.7 million.

Kaiser sold 260,000 long (2,240 pounds) tons of thermal coal to Denmark and France during the year.

Canada's Position Eroding

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada's competitive position with other trading nations is eroding fast, W. H. Wightman, manager of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association Industrial Relations Department, told an industrial relations management association meeting.

The average wage in Canada exceeded that of the United States last fall, and by early this year the Canadian level was at $4.78 an hour compared with $4.67 in the U.S.

He said that at the same time the absolute level of productivity in the U.S. remains substantially higher than in Canada.

"We will have to work a lot harder and a lot smarter to improve productivity and offset this disadvantage," Wightman said.

He said Canadians must ask themselves if Canada can afford not to rethink collective bargaining, since Canada lost more than nine million days due to strikes last year at a cost he said to be more than $2 billion.

Family, Work Go Together

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

LOS ANGELES — For businessmen who like to combine work with a family holiday, this city is ideal.

Hollywood, the television studios and nearby Disneyland are splendid baby-sitters. And the Farmers Market will keep the wife busy for hours — and out of the more expensive shops of Sunset Boulevard.

CP Air, which this week inaugurated its direct-flight service between Vancouver and Los Angeles, will pick up the tab for the return flight between Victoria and Vancouver for all Victoria passengers going on to L.A.

It is best to get down to California during the week to avoid the weekend crowds. Because of its mild climate, southern California never has a quiet season. The flow of visitors is heaviest during any school holiday — Christmas, Easter, weekends and the summer.

The ideal time to take the family to southern California is May. Unfortunately, this is difficult for families with school-age children.

For those able to travel this month, the following proposed schedule would prove most efficient. (The same trip can be made in summer — but be prepared for longer line-ups at all points).

If the business meeting is on a Wednesday, the family would depart on a Tuesday. CP Air's direct flights leave Vancouver at 1:45 p.m. daily (arriving 4:10 p.m.) and at 7 p.m. (arriving at 9:25 p.m.).

Victoria travel agents can recommend good hotels in the Hollywood area. For those interested in touring a movie studio, the Sheraton Universal is right across the street from Universal Studio.

Tuesday night could be used for a drive through Hollywood (with a rented car) and a look at the Sunset Strip. It is best to stay away from the Strip in daytime because the boutiques are open, the prices are high and the temptation for wives to buy clothes is a situation best circumvented where possible.

The drive (or bus tour) should include a stop at Grauman's Chinese Theatre to inspect the handprints of movie stars. It's free.

Then back to the hotel, dinner, a swim, color TV, whatever.

On Wednesday, the businessman has his meeting while the wife and family take the Universal Movie theatre tour. The tour is best in the morning when there is action at the studio and fewer people taking the tour. It opens at 10 a.m. and runs every 15 minutes. There is no need to make advance arrangements — just come and jump on the touring bus.

The price is a little steep at $4.95 (less for children) but it is a four-hour tour, including inspection of familiar street fronts, a look at movie props and possibly a glimpse of some big name stars. There are also special effects en route, such as the parting of the Red Sea (from The Ten Commandments) a flash flood, and a collapsing bridge.

Universal did Earthquake, the two Airport movies and the new release, Jaws. In TV it does Columbo, Lucille Ball productions and Marcus Welby. (Robert Young was waving at visitors this week).

In the afternoon, mom can take the children to Farmers Market, while the business meeting continues. This is a paradise for bargain hunters with acres of shops selling vegetables, paintings, jewelry and other crafts. There are plenty of places to eat but young children probably would get bored after about an hour.

Then reassemble at the hotel by 4 p.m. to get a look at the taping of the Johnny Carson show.

Advance reservations are advised. This is done by writing to NBC in Burbank, California, requesting tickets. A letter confirming your reservation is sent to you and the letter serves as your right to obtain tickets for that day.

Visitors are seated at 4:30 p.m., although taping does not begin until 5:30 p.m. The show runs for 90 minutes and ends promptly at 7 p.m. In this sample schedule, The Carson show is done on a Wednesday night. On Monday nights Carson has somebody standing in for him. Humor on the Carson show tends to be somewhat lowbrow but is not offensive for family viewing.

Watching the production of a TV show is great entertainment and it offers a close-up look at several stars.

Later that night, perhaps mom and dad will plan a trip to the Los Angeles Music Centre while the hotel acts as baby sitter for the children (if they are older).

Concerts at the Music Centre tend to be cultural events like ballet and opera.

The next day, Thursday, is to be a family fun day, presumably, with business completed on the Wednesday.

By rented car or bus, a trip to Long Beach and the Queen Mary is worthwhile. The former luxury liner is part hotel, part sea museum and part tourist display ship. It is open 24 hours a day, every day, but tours run during daylight hours only.

Then on to Marineland of the Pacific and Knott's Berry Farm, arriving at Disneyland Thursday night.

Disneyland closes at 6 p.m. but opens early in the morning. It is also closed Monday and Tuesday.

From mid-June to September it is open night and day, seven days a week.

By 3 p.m. Friday everything will have been done at least once (allow an extra day in the crowded season) and the family can drive to the airport for the return flight home. The direct flights leave at 8:30 a.m., which is useful mainly for businessmen only, and at 7 p.m., which works out well for most visitors. The drive from Disneyland to the airport is just under one hour. It will take over an hour if caught in the 4:30 p.m. rush.

The trip involves four days, Tuesday to Friday, but only three nights hotel accommodations.

At this time of year the weather will be ideal (17 Celsius) and the crowds will be light.

If more time is available, it is rewarding to drive south from Disneyland to San Juan Capistrano mission to look at the swallows and doves and then head further south to San Diego to see the world-famous zoo. The zoo will rival Disneyland as a highlight of the trip for children.

Just south of San Diego is Mexico in the form of Tiajuana, which is fine for a visit of a couple of hours to buy rings at low prices and to soak in the Mexican atmosphere. Two hours, however, is long enough.

Sudan Gets Aid

ROME (AP) — Sudan will receive emergency food aid worth $900,000 to help feed refugees who have crossed into the country from the neighboring Ethiopian province of Eritrea.

FUEL COMPLEX FOR SIBERIA

MOSCOW (Reuter) — The Soviet Union has started plans for a vast fuel and energy project in central Siberia, exploiting a huge coalfield to meet its growing energy needs, Pravda reports.

The site — a combination of coal quarries, power stations and engineering plants — will send electricity and coal-derived fuels to European Russia, the Urals and central Asia.

Pravda said the coalfield, which lies along part of the trans-Siberian railroad, east and west of the Yenisei River, could provide a billion tons of coal a year — about 50 per cent more than the current national output.

Pravda said six to eight 6.4-million-kilowatt power stations are envisaged, and planning has nearly been completed for the first of these.

LOCAL BANK DEPOSITS UP

Debits to individual bank accounts in the Victoria area during March totalled $2,749.5 million, up from $1,799.4 million in February and well ahead of the $1,225.7 million of the previous March.

The figures, collected by the Canadian Bankers Association, represent all amounts debited by the banks to the accounts of its customers.

Gulf Pays Foreign Bribe

NEW YORK (UPI)—Gulf Oil Corp. of Pittsburgh has admitted in secret testimony to the Securities and Exchange Commission that it paid $4 million in "Contributions" under pressure to politicians in a foreign country in order to be allowed to continue doing business there, the Wall Street Journal said Friday.

The country was not identified in the Journal dispatch.

The disclosure to the SEC was said to have been made by Gulf chairman B. R. Dorsey in explaining certain outlays which the SEC had questioned in Gulf's financial statements.

The article said Dorsey also told in the secret testimony of another occasion on which Gulf had to pay $200,000 to a politican in a country where it had invested $150 million in order to get the necessary permits to start actual operations.

Dorsey is said to have told the SEC that international companies by necessity operate in many countries at the "sufferance" of the host governments, and he said he feared that disclosure of the details of the payment and the identity of the country would jeopardize Gulf's $700 million investment there.

The SEC had accused Gulf in a suit filed March 11 of failing to account for foreign disbursements totalling $4.9 million and it said Gulf has admitted making $10.3 million in illegal domestic political contributions.

The Gulf affair follows by a few weeks an incident in which United Brands, Inc., admitted paying a bribe of $1.25 million to Honduran officials to get the export tax on bananas reduced. The disclosure of the case was preceded by the suicide of United Brands' chairman Eli Black and was followed by the ouster of Honduras's president, Gen. Oswaldo Lopez Y Arellano.

15% CAR INSURANCE HIKE SEEN BY PRIVATE FIRMS

TORONTO (CP)—Automobile insurance rates are expected to increase by an average 15 per cent in provinces where private insurance companies operate when 1975 rate schedules are introduced July 1, statistics compiled by the Insurance Bureau of Canada (IBC) show.

The IBC statistics indicate that private passenger insurance premiums will increase an average of 14.5 per cent while commercial vehicle premiums will increase an average of 15 per cent. Ontario motorists can expect over-all increases of about 13 per cent.

The statistics also show that the average cost of a bodily-injury-property-damage liability claim rose by 12.8 per cent to $1,063 in 1974. But the average number of accidents decreased, placing the over-all increase at 7.8 per cent.

Collision claims, with $100 deductible, increased by 11.4 per cent to an average of $596 while claims with $250 deductible increased to an average of $899 from $815 in 1973, up 10.3 per cent, the figures show. Claim costs from vehicle damage other than collision increased by 12.8 per cent to an average $211 in 1974.

An IBC spokesman said collision claim figures indicate once again that car repairs continue to be the most expensive component in auto insurance premium increases. Car repair costs account for about 70 per cent of total claim payments, he said.

The IBC also estimates that car repair costs, including increases in garage labor rates and auto replacement parts, rose about 23 per cent in 1974.

Phoney Coins For Olympics

OTTAWA (CP)—Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey said Friday that a counterfeit ring is manufacturing and selling phoney Olympic Gold coins in Europe.

He told Otto Jelinek (PC-High Park-Humber Valley) in the Commons that European police officials are co-operating with the RCMP in the investigation.

"There is a probability that some of the principals involved are Canadians."

NHL Rejects Seattle's Bid

SEATTLE (AP)—Vince Abbey, who was awarded a conditional 1976-77 franchise by the National Hockey League, said Friday the league's board of governors refused a $6-million offer that would have given Seattle a franchise next season.

"We made a $6-million cash proposal to the Pittsburgh Penguins and said in the alternative we will give the money, all cash to the NHL by June 15 for an expansion team," Abbey said.

"Bill Jennings told us, 'Whatever you do with Pittsburgh is your business.' Bill Wirtz of Chicago said, 'We'll discuss your proposal and get back to you.' The next thing we knew the league owners were heading for their planes to go home."

—Wirtz, president of the Black Hawks, chaired the Tuesday meeting in Chicago. Jennings of New York Rangers is head of the NHL's expansion committee.

Abbey said Bill Hughes, president of Vancouver Canucks which owned 55 per cent of the Seattle Hockey Club until recently, told him the Canucks would not operate a team here next season. Seattle, a long-time member of the now-defunct Western Hockey League, played in the Central League last season.

Frank Griffiths, the Canucks' board chairman, has indicated a final decision has not been made.

The NHL has given Abbey until May 15 to complete the franchise papers for 1976-77, pay $182,000 and submit the signatures of his partners.

"They mailed the conditional franchise papers to me April 5," Abbey said. "I should have gotten them last June when the franchises were awarded."

Abbey said he was borrowing $3 million from banks and getting $3 million from California investors. A representative for the Californian contingent, who asked not to be identified, confirmed Abbey's offer.

"He made the $6-million offer up front, but it had no impact on the NHL whatsoever," he said.

Meanwhile, the Seattle club's office closed Friday afternoon and Abbey said he was uncertain of his next course of action. He is considering a suit against the NHL.

Walker's Guarantee: Winner in Every Race

By popular demand, and because it's that season of the year again, here is this month's unadvertised special: Walker's Handy Hints to Horseplayers. So please tell your friends.

As usual, the results are guaranteed, one horse will win every race, but then sometimes the horses don't get to hear about the finer items like this and go about doing their own thing their way. And that's what happens when your good thing runs up the track.

Racing, as you know, is a chancy business at best, and if you can match the 30 per cent of public picks that get down in front at Ex-Park this summer, you will be doing better than all right. Which brings us to lesson No. 1, and this is very important.

Just because a horse is a favorite, it doesn't necessarily mean that it is the best horse in the race. It's simply that the bettors, through their wagering, think it is; and, by their wagers they make it the public choice. How many times, for instance, have you worked out your very own handicapping system, come up with what looks like a winner, only to get to trackside and find the public doesn't go along with your handicapping. Your horse is about four or five to one. So, you get worried, figure the other fellow knows more than you, change your mind, jump aboard the hot favorite and get left with a handful of mutuel tickets. Meanwhile, the one you picked the night before has won "breezing".

Signs to Look For

No, it's your money and your system. And as has been said here before it doesn't matter either if 10 handicappers out of 12 pick a horse to win, it doesn't increase that horse's chances of winning. It simply lowers the odds.

But those are only a few of the trade secrets. Handicappers are only trying to make a buck, too; and frankly, some of them are very good. They should be. They see the horses every day and when a horse starts to drop in class, beware.

It most often means that it's not right, perhaps sore, or the owner may be sacrificing a claim to get a winner. That's when the odds-board can be the tell-all. For if a horse is say, 10-1 on the morning line (that means the official track handicapper doesn't think much of its chances), and shortly before post time the odds quickly drop to 3-1 or thereabouts, take care. That could be "stable money" going on the horse. They may know something you don't, and, any help you can get, take. It's tough enough guessing along with all the rest.

There are a couple of other handicapping secrets you probably know about, but during the winter the old mental process has become a little rusty. So why not a refresher.

The age-old argument is first. Do you take the speed horse or the come-from-behinder? Well, the general rule of thumb, especially in sprints, is to take the speed horse. This is especially so on small tracks, or bull-rings, as they are known in the trade.

'Slop' Is Like 'Fast'

There's one exception to the rule however; and that's when you have two noted speed horses who love to dangle on the front end. Then beware, because they might kill each other off, and some horse, laying off the pace, could get up to steal it all. But the norm is if a speed horse looks like it will have its own way, that's as good a bet as any providing it rates in the company it's in. On a sloppy track, the speed horse again has the edge, because "sloppy" is rated like "fast". In mud, it's a different matter. Anything can happen, and often does.

Oh sure, there are lots of other tidbits, the bloom on the coat, a horse's attitude in the stall and on parade. A nervous horse may break on in a sweat and run "rank" as they say. If you're looking for longshots, that's your privilege. And if you note a speed horse that ran "short" last time (that means it didn't hold its speed) take another look. It could be ready. And read the fine print in the Racing Form. If a horse was in trouble last out and is back with the same kind again, it's a possibility. Sometimes, too, a trainer will make a significant jockey change. In other words he could get the track's leading rider. His horse may be ready!

So, maybe it will help.

Of course, then there's the story about a noted sports writer in the U.S. who walked into the press box of a major track, picked up a program from a batch of papers on a desk and had phenomenal luck. He bet on No. 5 in the first race and it paid big. He wagered on No. 3 in the second, and had another healthy payoff. He collected on another longshot in the third. It was about then that someone pointed out he had the wrong program. It was yesterday's. And when he got the right one, he couldn't do a thing right.

G'nite all.

Still Alive

MONTREAL (CP)—The possibility of Brazil's international soccer star Pele playing with New York Cosmos of the North American Soccer League remains alive, the Star says.

The newspaper quotes Clive Toye, manager of the Cosmos, as saying in a telephone interview that his club "was enormously close to signing Pele."

WEST HAM AND CELTIC ROLL TO CUP VICTORIES

LONDON (CP) — Alan Taylor, in his first season of major soccer, scored both goals today to lift favored West Ham United to a 2-0 victory over Fulham in the English League's FA Cup final.

At the same time, Glasgow Celtic captured the Scottish Cup with a 3-1 triumph over Airdrieonians.

Taylor scored his goals within a span of five minutes in the second half and turned the closely-contested game in West Ham's favor. His scores came in the 60th and 65th minute.

Until then, underdog Fulham of the Second Division had showed no signs of nervous play before a sellout crowd of more than 100,000 at Wembley. Fulham did, in fact, test its First Division rivals several times in the first half but was unable to finish off plays in the goal area.

Fifteen minutes into the second half, hustling winger Stever Holland pushed the ball inside to Billy Jennings, who sent a swerving, 20-yard shot at the Fulham Goal.

Goalkeeper Peter Mellor could only finger-tip the ball away and Taylor rammed the rebound between two players.

Five minutes later, Graham Paddon launched a shot from the left that Mellor couldn't hold and Taylor was there to side-foot the ball into the net.

At Glasgow, the part-time footballers from Airdrie had their one brief moment of glory just before halftime when David McCann evened the score at 1-1, striker Paul Wilson tallying an earlier goal for Celtic.

But Celtic regained the lead almost immediately, Wilson scoring his second of the afternoon. A penalty goal by Peter McCluskey ensured a 24th Cup victory for the overwhelming favorites.

Draft Starts New Battle

MONTREAL (CP) — Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, reiterated Friday the NHL will not draft under-age junior hockey players at this year's amateur draft.

But by the same token, the NHL president said the league will not enter any agreement "with anybody who would put us at a financial disadvantage."

Campbell was commenting on a Thursday statement by the rival World Hockey Association in which Ben Hatskin of Winnipeg, chief executive officer of the WHA, said his league will not sign an agreement to pay the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association for junior players it drafts.

"We are going to honor the guidelines set out by the federal government that we not sign any under-age juniors," Campbell said. "That is any player under 20 who has not exhausted his junior eligibility."

Earlier the WHA said it would not draft 18-year-old players this year.

Campbell said the NHL had been prepared to enter a further pro-amateur agreement with the CAHA, an agreement whereby the professional league pays the amateur group for junior players drafted and signed to pro contracts. The current agreement between the two groups "technically expired at the end of the 1975 playing season."

"If we entered into an agreement we would meet our obligations," Campbell added. "We have paid a lot of money to support junior hockey, but we're not going to pay any more if we are put at a financial disadvantage. This is a dollar war."

In other words the NHL will not enter into a new agreement to pay the CAHA unless the WHA does.

Last year the two leagues agreed to pay the CAHA $40,000 for each under-age junior drafted and $20,000 for each graduate junior drafted in the first round. The WHA currently owes the CAHA about $190,000 for players drafted last year. It has not indicated when, and if, the rest of the money will be forthcoming.

"We don't owe a dime," Campbell said, when asked if the NHL still owed money to the CAHA. "We have tidied up all our obligations to the CAHA and we paid enough money to fulfill our obligation to the Amateur Hockey Association of the United States.

HIGHROCK CAPTURES THIRD STRAIGHT TITLE

Highrock Saints, like cream, stay on top.

The Saints retained the Greater Victoria junior high school rugby championship for a third straight year Friday by defeating St. Michael's University School 7-6 at Royal Athletic Park.

Highrock's hero in the sudden-death final was Larry Hobday. His penalty kick, coming with only about three minutes remaining in the closely-fought battle, provided the winning margin.

Brian Hunt of Highrock scored the game's only try while Keith Battersby kicked two penalty goals to account for all St. Michael's points.

Islanders See Signs of Hope

Times News Services

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — New York Islanders are planning another comeback. In fact, it may have already begun.

After erasing a 3-0 deficit with four consecutive victories against Pittsburgh Penguins in their Stanley Cup quarter-final series, the Islanders find themselves down 2-0 to Philadelphia Flyers.

They hope to get untracked Sunday in the third game of the best-of-seven National Hockey League semi-final playoff.

"There's no way we are going to quit," vowed Denis Potvin, the Islanders' all-star defenceman.

Potvin believes the Islanders may have already started their comeback. After falling behind 4-1 in the second game of the series at Philadelphia Thursday night, New York scored three goals to send the game into overtime.

Bobby Clarke's goal at 2:56 of the overtime session gave the Flyers the decision, but Potvin feels the Islanders proved a point.

Islanders coach Al Arbour agreed that his club had finally started to generate some momentum late in Thursday's game.

"Everybody was doing his job, and the momentum started to swing our way through a lot of hard work," Arbour said. "They're a bunch of fighters and they'll fight right down to the last second."

Meanwhile, there were a number of encouraging things for coach Scotty Bowman of Montreal Canadiens to think about following his club's convincing triumph over Buffalo Sabres in the third game of their semi-final series, including the play of left winger Steve Shutt.

Shutt, Montreal's top player in the playoffs last season, did not have a good start in the series against the Sabres.

"He was injured in the series against Vancouver," Bowman explained. "He's been slow coming back.

"I thought he played well Thursday night. Shutt and Yvan Cournoyer were coming back and overtaking guys . . . Everybody can check. That's hard work."

Shutt has not been known as a great defensive player in his career nor has Cournoyer for that matter. Yet both players put in strong two-way performances as the Canadiens topped the Sabres 7-0 Thursday for their first win of the series which resumes tonight in Montreal.

"I think the fact we hadn't beaten them all year was starting to hit hard," Bowman said. "Our guys are fooling themselves if they feel Buffalo won't come out and play a better hockey game tonight."

Jockeys Accused

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York State racing and wagering board continued an investigation Friday into charges against Angel Cordero Jr. following accusations that the jockey was involved in the fixing of races.

Trainer John Cotter charged Cordero and three other jockeys, none of whom were identified, with fixing triple and exacta races and cashing large payoffs. Cotter made the accusations Thursday on the final day of a hearing before the board.

The trainer had been denied a licence by the board earlier this year after being charged with drugging horses and falsifying ownership papers. The hearing was to determine whether the licence would be reinstated.

Cup Contest

Victoria's London Boxing Club will face the mainland's Bradner Red Shirts team in a Province Cup soccer semi-final Sunday at Royal Athletic Park.

The sudden-death contest will start at 2:15 p.m.

Blanks a Real Bullet Batting Against Reds

By The Associated Press

Cincinnati Reds have finally learned how to pitch to Larvell Blanks—very carefully.

Blanks is not normally a longball hitter, but he is whenever he sees Red—and Friday night, he continued his assault on Cincinnati pitching.

"They throw more strikes to me than anybody else in the league," Blanks said after his two-out homer led Atlanta Braves to a 6-5 decision over the Reds.

Blanks has been a Cincinnati nemesis for some time now.

"I always have good luck against them, for some reason," said Blanks, who hit his first major-league home run against the Reds in 1972.

A week ago, he came through with an 11th-inning double that provided the Braves with their only other victory over Cincinnati this season.

On Friday night, he said he was going for the long ball again.

"I'm not a home run hitter," he said. "But with two out and none on, I'm just swinging away."

In the other National League games, New York Mets beat Montreal Expos 3-0, Philadelphia Phillies defeated Pittsburgh Pirates 9-5, St. Louis Cardinals beat Chicago Cubs 5-1, Los Angeles Dodgers blanked San Diego Padres 3-0 and San Francisco Giants beat Houston Astros 5-4.

In the American League, Texas Rangers struck for all their runs in the ninth inning to defeat California Angels 4-3 and run their winning streak to six. Elsewhere, Cleveland Indians edged Baltimore Orioles 4-3; Bill North's 12-inning single drove in the winning run as Oakland clipped Chicago White Sox 4-3; Minnesota Twins defeated Kansas City Royals 4-1, and Milwaukee Brewers downed the New York Yankees 4-2.

Jerry Koosman pitched a four-hitter and singled home the game's first run, leading New York past Montreal. Koosman, 2-0, outdueled Dave McNally, 3-2, and delivered a two-out RBI single in the second inning after Jack Heidemann's one-out triple.

Philadelphia scored four unearned runs in the first inning, three on Mike Schmidt's homer, and went on to beat Pittsburgh. Tug McGraw nailed down the game for Philadelphia in the ninth, recording his first save for the Phillies.

MACS' HOME OPENER DELAYED ONE WEEK

Victoria McDonalds have been forced to cancel their scheduled home opener against Richmond Roadrunners on Tuesday because of the continuing labor dispute affecting Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Instead, they will play their first away game in the Western Canada Major Junior Lacrosse League on May 11 against the Roadrunners in Burnaby and, if the dispute isn't settled by then, open their home schedule against New Westminster Junior Salmonbellies in the Mill Bay Arena, May 13.

McDonalds play their first game tonight in the league's pre-season tournament at Richmond, meeting Richmond Roadrunners, who defeated Coquitlam J-Hawks 10-7 in overtime Friday. In Friday's other tournament contest, Burnaby Cablevision nipped New Westminster Salmonbellies 5-4.

Flyers Leading

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — Barrie Flyers continued their role as the reluctant victors in Allan Cup playoff action Friday night, beating Thunder Bay Twins 8-5 in the opener of their best-of-seven national senior hockey final.

The Flyers, who forfeited one game of their Eastern final series last weekend in St. John's, Nfld., in a protest over violence, went into the opener of the final series with a depleted roster and tired out from their eastern trip.

Barrie captain Corby Adams, pressed into coaching service after playing coach Darryl Sly was suspended for pulling the team off the ice in the third game at St. John's, said he couldn't understand why the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association was "in such a hurry to get the final series over with."

"We played two games last weekend and it'll be two more games this weekend and it's not fair," said Adams who will lead the defending-champion Flyers into the second game of the final tonight.

A crowd of 2,517 was on hand to watch the Flyers easily outclass their smaller opponents in the first two periods, outshooting the Twins 28-17 and outscoring them 6-2 in the first 40 minutes of play.

Series Tied

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — New Haven Nighthawks evened the Calder Cup American Hockey League playoff final series at one game each Friday night, defeating Springfield Indians 5-3 behind a pair of goals by Rod Norrish and the strong goaltending of Brian Holderness.

Stable Boys Black Out the Guineas

NEWMARKET, England (Reuter) — Striking Newmarket stable boys, unbowed despite violent clashes with fans Thursday, succeeded Friday in blacking out British television coverage of the Guineas race meeting.

Technicians of independent television refused to cross the picket lines set up by the strikers at the race course entrances.

Racing officials tightened security by bringing in about 250 police, some with dogs. About 70 strikers were on picket duty near the starting stalls but made no attempt to go onto the track.

In unprecedented scenes Thursday, jockey Willie Carson was dragged off his horse and slashed with his whip before fans and police cleared the track.

The boys want a $10.45 increase in their $70.20 a week basic wage, but the trainers refuse to offer more than an extra $7.

A union official denied that the strike was crumbling, even though it has so far been supported by fewer than half the town's 800 stable boys and girls, and most trainers have been able to carry on their work as usual.

IT'S FULL STEAM AHEAD FOR SOFTBALL CIRCUITS

The Victoria-area softball leagues go for the "full swing" on a new season this Sunday.

That's when the district's four senior leagues start play.

The Victoria Senior Women's League will be busiest. All eight entries will be involved in the opening-day action at the two-field Hyacinth Park.

Two games will start at 1 p.m. and another pair at 3 p.m.

Men will start on a quieter note. The Stuffy McGinnis Major Men's League at Central Park and the Sidney League at Sanscha Park each will open with a single evening offering, starting at 6:30 p.m.

A new eight-team men's league at Heywood Avenue Park will open with an afternoon-evening doubleheader.

The McGinnis League will actually start tonight when Royal Oak Sporting Goods visits Port Angeles for an evening doubleheader.

Considered the premier league, the McGinnis circuit has an inter-city look with Nanaimo and Sooke Merchants joining Port Angeles as out-of-town entries.

With a pitching staff expected to include veterans Barry Gallia, Jim Swanson and Ken Larsen, Nanaimo originally planned to enter the Pacific Coast Fastball League along with Victoria Bates.

Milliken Might Be Reef On Gray's Charted Course

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Mike Gray doesn't want to influence Grant Milliken, but the Uplands amateur thinks it "would be kinda nice" if the Vancouver Island Open golf champion where allowed to play in three European tournaments in July.

Which means Mr. Gray has to defeat Mr. Milliken in Sunday's 36-hole playoff for the CFAX Trophy at Glen Meadows Golf Club to acquire the credentials.

The 24-year-old Gray is concentrating on Sunday's match, but three major European events aren't buried too deeply in the back of his mind.

Gray hopes to play in the Luxembourg Open early in July and, in following weeks, the Swiss Open and Swiss Amateur tournaments.

On his return to Canada, Gray also hopes to qualify for the Canadian Amateur, to be played in Saint John, N.B., Aug. 13-16.

Qualifying for the Canadian event, of course, will depend on his showing in the B.C. Amateur at Nanaimo June 11-14.

His trip to Europe is a certainty. His mother resides in Switzerland, and Mike completed travel arrangements this week.

Playing in the three overseas events isn't as certain.

"The tournaments fall in nicely with my visit to Europe, but I haven't filed any entries yet," he said Friday. "But I do hope to play in them . . . for the experience."

Reaching the final of the Island Open may be only the start of a memorable summer for the 1967 city junior champ.

Gray, whose previous best showing in the Island Open was reaching the semifinals in 1973, has a two handicap. He "feels good" about his game, principally because Mike has started "thinking ahead."

Charting a course in advance, he confessed, wasn't one of his stronger points in the past.

Now, however, it is a part of the game he emphasizes and it reflects in advance to Sunday's date with Milliken, the also-youthful Gorge Vale greenskeeper.

"I'm clubbing myself better than I ever did before," said Gray. As an axample, he termed last Sunday's semifinal victory over Oak Bay's Mike Parker as "one of the most satisfying rounds I have ever played."

He scored an approximate five-over par 75, including two double bogeys, but regarded it as a great round considering the windy weather conditions that prevailed at Colwood last Sunday.

Milliken, like Gray, also is participating in his first Island Open final.

Their title argument will start with 18-hole rounds commencing at 9 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

Preceding the championship finalists off the tee, at 8:50 and 1:20, will be handicap finalists Ray Seymour, Jr., and veteran George Murphy, both of Gorge Vale.

Despite the "handicap" status, there will be no strokes. Both Murphy and Seymour play off handicaps of nine.

Timbermen Are Back With 'Old Days' Link

NANAIMO — After an absence of 10 years, Nanaimo Timbermen come marching back into senior lacrosse company, tonight.

Timbermen, who dropped out of the old Inter-City League after the 1965 season, make their debut in the Western Lacrosse Association tonight against the national-champion New Westminster Salmonbellies.

And there will be at least one link between the "new" and "old" Timbermen. Among the 20-man roster declared this week by coach Don Morelli will be Alec Dugan son of Arnie Dugan, a standout on Nanaimo teams more than a decade ago.

Among the players declared by Morelli are three Victoria residents—Muzz Bryant, Rick Baker and Harry Ruitenbeek. Bryant formerly played with Victoria Shamrocks.

In addition to Bryant, the only other player with previous senior experience is defenceman Ted Liebich, another former Shamrock.

Goaltending chores will be shared by Earl Nicholson and Gary McLaughlin.

Other players retained by Morelli are Wayne Sutherland and Brandon Rowe-Sleemon, a pair recently obtained from Montreal Quebecois of the National Lacrosse League; Ron Sywak, Dave St. Jean, Keith Manns, Randy Noble, Don Stephenson, Grant Spencer, Al Benson, Dave Taylor, John Brassington, Truis Asdal and Bob Avender.

Goalies On Spot

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — It may be open season on goaltenders tonight when two high-scoring major junior hockey teams — Toronto Marlboros and Sherbrooke Beavers — face off in the opening game of the Memorial Cup round-robin tournament.

The Marlboros, winners of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series, qualified for the annaul Canadian championship after a 23-game post-season playoff grind following a runaway first-place finish in the regular season.

New Westminster Bruins, winner of the Western Canada Hockey League championship, make up the third team in the eight-day tournament that takes the top team from each of Canada's three major junior leagues.

Toronto scored 469 goals in the regular season, and had top performances from Bruce Boudreau, the league's leading scorer with a record 165 points on 68 goals and 97 assists, and Mark Napier, a powerful two-way player who has already signed a contract with Toronto Toros of the World Hockey Association.

Sherbrooke, winners of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League, had eight players who scored 30 goals in the regular season. The Beavers swept to a first-place finish and lost only one game in three rounds of playoffs.

The goaltending edge has to be given to Sherbrooke. Nick Sanza was the league's top goaltender in the regular season, appearing in 66 games and registering a 3.05 goals against average. He has seven shutouts, including two in the playoffs and one when Sherbrokke beat the Soviet Union's national junior team 7-0 in an exhibition game.

Steve Bosco and Gary Carr shared the Toronto goaltending duties during the regular season and gave up 303 goals, fifth best in the league. Carr played regularly throughout the playoffs and was inconsistent in the eight-game quarter-final series with Kingston Canadians as well as later tests with Sudbury Wolves and the final series with Hamilton Fincups.

The Bruins are idle until Monday when they take on Sherbrooke. The teams will play each other in the first round. Toronto and New Westminster play Wednesday.

The team with the best record gains a bye into the Sunday, May 11, final while the other two play off Friday. All night games start at 5 p.m. PDT with the Sunday windup scheduled for 11 a.m. on the CTV network.

Sophomore Leads

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Maria Astrologes, a second-year professional, set a women's course-record 66 Friday to grab the first-round lead in the $40,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association Birmingham golf tournament.

Miss Astrologes put together eight birdies for the record and a one-shot lead over defending champion Janie Blalock. JoAnn Washam shot a 68, two strokes off the pace.

Tied at 69, three shots back, were Donna Caponi Young and Sandra Post, formerly of Oakville, Ont., and now residing in Florida. There were five 70s and twice as many 71s, putting 20 players under par after the opening round.

Monaco Field Sliced to 18

MONTE CARLO (AP) — The Monaco Grand Prix car race — scheduled May 11, two weeks after the accident-marred Spanish round of the world championship at Barcelona — will be limited to 18 Formula I cars, the organizers said Friday.

They said they were in agreement with a request for the limit from the Formula I Constructors Association, but pointed out it was the constructors themselves who two years ago forced the number of starters to 25 from 18.

Lee Predicts Fight In Texas-Title Bid

HOUSTON (AP) — Lee Trevino is making no premature victory claims in the $150,000 Houston Open golf tournament.

"You've never got it won here," Trevino said after opening up a two-stroke advantage with a three-under-par 69 in Friday's second round. "Some guy can come out of the pack and shoot a 65 at you and you've got yourself a fight.

Despite the disclaimers, the reigning Professional Golfers' Association national champion was in firm command with a 135 total—nine-under par, on the new 6,929-yard Woodlands Country Club course—halfway through this race for a $30,000 first prize.

More important than the cash, however, is Trevino's desire to win his first title ever in his native Texas.

"I've finished second in all of 'em," he said. He was second to Buddy Allin last year in the Byron Nelson Classic, second to Mike Hill in the 1972 San Antonio Texas Open, second to Homero Blancas in the 1970 Colonial National Invitation, and second to Roberto De Vicenzo in the 1968 Houston tournament.

His closest challengers are Dale Douglass and Eddie Pearce, tied at 137. Douglass and Pearce each had a 70 on Friday, and each had a pair of three-putts that kept them out of a share of first place.

Three strokes off the pace at 138 was a big group composed of Australian veteran Bruce Crampton, Jim Colbert, Joe Inman, rookie Alan Tapie, Mike Wynn, Gil Morgan and Jerry McGee.

Morgan had a 68. Colbert shot a 69. Crampton, Wynn and Inman had 70s and Tapie and McGee took 71s.

David Graham, who shared the first-round lead with Trevino, dropped four shots back to 139 after blowing to a 73.

Arnold Palmer had to rally for a hard-won 70 that included an eagle and two birdies to just make the cut for the final two rounds at 144.

Also squeaking in with 144s were Toronto golfers Ben Kern and George Knudson. Kern had a second consecutive 72 while Knudson shot 73 after an opening 71.

Defending Houston Open champ Dave Hill shot 74-147 and failed to qualify.

It pays to live Japanese style

TOKYO (CNS) — Halfway around the world from home, jangled by jet-lag and befuddled by a language you can't understand, you have no choice but to grab that high-priced room in the fancy, western-style hotel because they at least speak English there. Right?

Wrong.

Before we left for Tokyo, I consulted a popular budget guide to Japan, and had my airline make a reservation for us in a typical ryokan (inn), where English was not spoken.

It turned out to be a short walk from a subway which was just a few minutes from the Ginza. The Ryokan masuya is located in a wooded section of Tokyo amid delicate private homes.

English is not spoken, and the style is strictly Japanese. We slept on floor mats, bathed in a wooden tub, received and returned many smiling bows, and paid less than half the rate some friends forked over downtown at the new Imperial. A ryokan room for two is about $20.

Our first day, we didn't know our way around, and so had breakfast at a western hotel for close to $3 each. The eggs were runny, the toast brittle, and the coffee as weak as tea.

The next day, we followed some Japanese going to work, and joined them for breakfast in a modern coffee shop an easy walk from our inn.

We each got one hard-boiled egg, a piece of ham between two slices of buttered toast, and coffee — for 50 cents per person.

Downtown, where credit cards rule and English is spoken, tourists were spending close to $10 for a hamburger, milk shake and cherry pie.

A few blocks away, near their hotel, we dined at one of Tokyo's many restaurants where two full meals and a quart of beer cost $2 for two persons, service included.

In Tokyo, it is easy to dine with the Japanese because menus are not used in many small restaurants. Instead they put authentic plastic models of their dishes in display cases.

These cases are outside the restaurants, and even contain the different brands and sizes of beer and sake available.

The shops tend to specialize in one kind of food, so you'd eat tempura at one place, noodles at another, and raw fish at still another.

Just go inside, motion to the waitress, and walk into the street to point out which dishes you want. These places are well-scrubbed and steamily comfortable.

Tipping is not allowed in Japan, because laborers enjoy their work, and feel insulted if you try to bribe them for doing what they feel they are obligated to do.

Being fans of Japanese cuisine, we ate noodles, fried foods and raw fish, drank some of the world's best beers, and generally got off for around $2 a meal, tip included. So were the bows and smiles.

Two people can take a ride on the Tokyo subway for about 25 cents, and the station stops are marked in English. And the other riders are more than happy to help with directions.

TRAVEL TIPS

Tourists plentiful on Waikiki beach

By STAN DELAPLANE

HONOLULU — From thirty floors up at The Top of the Ilikai, you can see all of the famous beach at Waikiki. Brown surfers ride the cresting wave that pours like sugar on ink-blue water.

Hotel people say they're 95 per cent full. That recession — which is murdering Europe — hasn't hurt Hawaii. But the beach doesn't look as full to me. Taxi driver from the airport said his business is off. But "maybe more people take the bus now."

Tourists run close to three million a year. Five times the population of all the islands. Each spends $41 a day. Maybe less this year, taking buses instead of taxis.

Good bus system to anywhere on Oahu which is the city and county of Honolulu. Bus is 25 cents. Senior citizens ride free.

Four of every five islanders live on Oahu. Package tours from mainland around the islands and home again in ten days are around $400.

Lot of people quite satisfied to sun on the beach at Waikiki. Spend the evening in posh hotels watching the sunset through a rum-and-sugar maitai.

There are quickie tours. Four islands in twelve high speed hours. Begin at 6:30 in the morning. Back in Honolulu at p.m. Costs $99.

"... what to wear in the evening in Hawaii?"

You see more dressy clothes at Waikiki than you do in the outer islands. Women in cocktail dresses. Men wearing jacket and tie. There's enough resistance to this that Canlis has two dining rooms: Coat and tie in the upper room. Tails out aloha shirts below. (Where the music is and I like it better.)

The third floor at the Hawaiian Regent—new and I think the best restaurant in Waikiki—told me: "We prefer a jacket and tie. But an aloha shirt is all right."

In yesterdays, when we came over on the dressy Lurline, the Royal Hawaiian insisted on dinner jackets and black tie. But now we travel light by jet. I haven't seen a tuxedo in the islands since Laurance Rockefeller opened the posh and expensive Mauna Kea on the Big Island. Sic transit gloria! (And whatever happened to Gloria? Or was it Sheila?)

Extra star for Celle

Celle off beaten path

CELLE, West Germany (CNS) — The prestigious Michelin guide and I have just parted company over this former ducal town.

It may not be a final parting, though. Michelin's series of green books on various countries' sights and cultures, the red tomes on hotels and restaurants, and the maps remain among the world's best. I have trusted and admired these publications for years. But with Celle they've goofed.

Michelin gives one star to places worth a visit, two to those worth a detour, and three to those worth a journey.

Celle, a colorful and romantic town of 80,000 located out of the usual tourist path about 60 miles south of Hamburg, rates two of the coveted stars.

It's worth a leisurely journey, so in my very own rating system it gets four stars.

Here are some of the reasons.

The town itself, residential seat of the principality of Luneburg some six centuries ago, has scores of beautifully restored architectural gems representing Renaissance, baroque, Gothic and other styles. A short walk through the old section and you feel transported to the 17th Century, and even earlier, when most of the houses and shops were erected.

The structures are mostly timbered, with A-frame tiled roofs and richly carved fronts.

Like the houses, the streets are usually narrow and some have been made into pedestrian malls. There's color everywhere. And there's harmony, for in this section even the modern stores, shops and the restaurants are housed in faithfully restored buildings.

Since no tour operator except perhaps a native includes this town in his or her brochures, tourists are seldom if ever seen, let alone bumped into. This may account for the burghers' easygoing and friendly attitude.

In the middle of town above a manicured mini-hill circled by a tree-lined stream is Schloss Celle, a wheat-hued castle founded in 1292 as a stronghold by Otto the Stern, the duke of Brunswick-Luneburg.

The castle, which has been remodelled and refurbished several times over the centuries, can best be explored on one of the daily tours conducted by the Celle Tourist Office. The key attractions are the chapel, its pure Renaissance interior full of priceless paintings and other works of art, the castle's impressive Gothic Hall, the State Rooms on the second floor, the Porcelain Chamber, and the 17th Century theatre, a small baroque "comedy house" done in reds, eggshell white and lime, that is the oldest theatre in Germany.

Opposite the castle is the Bomann Museum, one of this country's most interesting. Among other things, it has a large collection of uniforms spanning several centuries.

Celle is also a southern gateway to a vacationland much loved by Germans and Scandinavians, but practically unknown to anyone else: the Luneburger Heide, the heath country of golden furze and purple heather.

Germans think of this part of their homeland as soul country, ancient moorlands that now make up a 70-square-mile nature reserve where cars are verboten but hikers, horsemen and black-faced sheed are welcome.

Celle has its own nature park just a few minutes north of town. It has a youth hostel, camping facilities, an animal preserve, mini-golf, tennis courts, canoeing, swimming and even saunas.

In and around town you'll find hotels, guesthouses and inns to suit every taste and budget.

There's more to see and do around here than we have space to talk about, but I'll mention something else that contributed to my decision to lavish my four stars on the place.

I spent a few short but memorable minutes in Celle's Stadtkirche, or Town Church, a light and airy baroque structure built in 1308. Intrigued by the gleaming silver pipes of the organ I asked and was shown the instrument by a custodian.

He encouraged me to play and I did, the magnificent sound filling the large building and sending goose pimples through my arms.

Johann Sebastian Bach used to play on this instrument, the custodian told me.

Right then and there I gave Celle its fourth star.

Travel press tours city

A contingent of newspapermen and women will be introduced to Victoria's old world charms and modern conveniences Tuesday and Wednesday as part of tour of the Lower Mainland and the Greater Victoria area sponsored by CP Air.

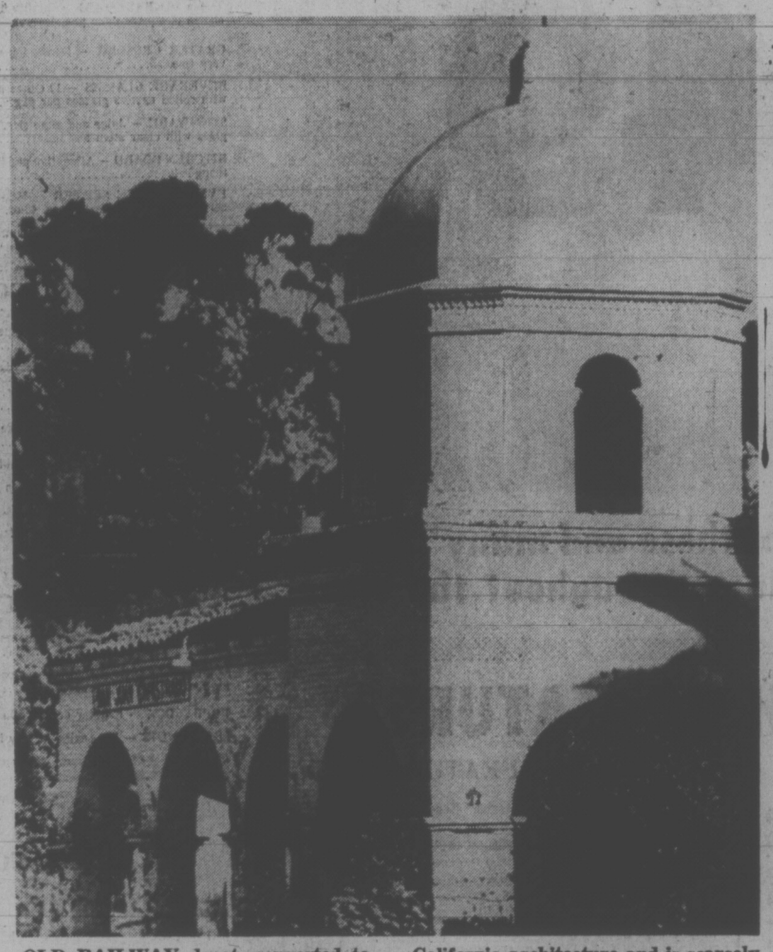
The tour is the second sponsored by the airline in connection with its twice-daily nonstop air route to Los Angeles, inaugurated April 27. A group of B.C. newsman toured Southern California tourist centres last week. The provincial government's travel department will be hosts at a dinner at the Empress Tuesday might.

Just two-and-a-half hours flying time away, the service to Los Angeles is the second route to California gained by the airline and complements its daily service to San Francisco, begun in 1968.

The current press tour is designed to attract tourists in growing numbers to B.C. to add to the growing tourism income, according to CP Air's Western Canada public relations manager Jim McKeachie.

In conjunction with the new air service, the airline offers numerous travel packages to the many attractions available in Southern California, and is also preparing a new tour program using Prudential Lines featuring a one-way cruise and one-way air, journey combined with three-day, two-night stopover packages in Vancouver, San Francisco and Los Angeles. Eight different combinations either northbound or southbound will be available. Optional Canadian Rockies side trips will be available to U.S. travelers.

Mission soothes weary traveler



OLD RAILWAY depot, converted to restaurant-sightseeing - shopping complex, will open its doors Monday. It is prime example of authentic early California architecture and is scarcely more than a city block from famous San Juan Capistrano Mission.

SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO, Calif. — Without fail, tourists flock to this sleepy little city midway between Los Angeles and San Diego to witness its famed miracle of the swallows.

The tiny birds comply by arriving each March 19, St. Joseph's Day, and the throngs depart.

But the swallows have competition these days as an attention-getter. New and old tourist attractions now vie for the tourist dollar and will help keep San Juan Capistrano on the map should the worst happen and the swallows didn't return.

Its active Chamber of Commerce has been busily cooperating with tourist organizations to make the city a "must to see" item on the itinerary of visitors to Southern California. Last week, in co-operation with CP Air the chamber hosted a touring group of British Columbia newsmen in connection with the airline's twice-daily nonstop air service to Los Angeles, inaugurated April 27.

Its prize exhibit, of course, is the Mission San Juan Capistrano.

In a setting of beautiful fountains, trees and flowers, the time-enriched relics of a devout past attract hundreds of visitors daily from near and far.

Formally dedicated in 1776 by Father Junipero Serra, the mission was named for the crusader San Juan de Capistrano. Construction of the mission's third and largest church was begun in 1797 and completed in 1806. It was built of stone and was a tribute to the builders' art and skill of that period. The floor plan was in the shape of a cross 180 feet loing and 90 wide.

From its gracefully arched roof rose seven domes and a tall campanario (belfry) which was visible for miles.

Only six years after completion, the earthquake of 1812 reduced most of it to rubble, killing many of the worshippers inside the building. In 1865, an attempt to rebuild the church also met with disaster from torrential rains. Parts of the great stone church still stand majestically, cloaked in clinging vines which beautify the memento from the past.

Two or three leisurely hours can be devoted to walking among the mission's lush gardens, restored workshops and its chapel, which is still in daily use and has a beautiful 300 - year - old Spanish altar brought from Barcelona in 1776. Cost . . . 50 cents per adult. Children are admitted free of charge.

Another must on a visit here, is the historic El Adobe Restaurant, which reflects the charm, romance and hospitality of early California.

Its meals are excellent and the rustic atmosphere create a cheerful respite for the weary traveller.

History of El Adobe goes back to 1778. The original building is now its cocktail lounge and opposite it is the Fiesta Room, built in 1812. Originally these two buildings were separated by a passage way for stage coaches on overnight journeys and the lobby now occupies this area. An authentic Spanish dungeon has become the wine cellar.

Its recently reconstructed patio will soon contain a small chapel for weddings and the area has a translucent sliding roof making it ideal for year-round entertaining under magnificent trees more than a century old.

In all, the 62-mile distance from Los Angeles, make this city a worthwhile stop on any traveler's itinerary. Statistically the sun shines almost every day and its rays are cooled by a prevailing offshore breeze. Its summers are cool, with an annual average temperature of 25 degrees Celcius and 16 degrees minimum.

Some Films Difficult To Review

NEW YORK (NYT) — Bad movies by ambitious no-talents are easy to write about, either with pious indignation and outrage or with venom of the sort that always sells more papers than affection ever did. The most difficult films to criticize are the ambitious movies that fail in parts, that are neither bad nor good, neither smash hits nor dismal flops, in spite of the intelligence and talents of the people involved. It's especially tough if you think you can see evidence of the talent and intelligence throughout the particular film.

Such was the case recently when, in a very short period of time, I saw Peter Bogdanovich's At Long Last Love, producer Ray Stark's Funny Lady, a sort of retread of Funny Girl directed by Herbert Ross, and George Roy Hill's The Great Waldo Pepper. With the possible exception of Funny Lady, none of these three is bad, but only one, The Great Waldo Pepper, could be called likeable. Because they are movies that might be easily dismissed except by special interest groups (Burt Reynolds fans, Barbra Streisand fans, Robert Redford fans), I feel an almost suicidal need to defend them, sort of, without once saying "on the other hand..."

At Long Last Love is a 1930-ish Hollywood musical comedy, beautifully and wittily set, costumed, decorated and scored (with more than a dozen songs by the late Cole Porter) and starring Cybill Shepherd and Burt Reynolds who have, between them, four left feet and who sing with a gallantry that reminds me of small children taking their first solo swim across the deep end. They've been taught the fundamentals but haven't yet attained ease or style.

Everyone in At Long Last Love tries very hard but when you notice that performers like Madeline Kahn and Eileen Brennan are trying, you know that something is decidedly wrong not with them but with the material — the pacing, the lines. Only Burt Reynolds come through with honors, playing Bogdanovich's idea of Depression Hollywood's idea of a playboy millionaire with just the right mixture of comic fervor and detachment.

If there's a Beverly Hills in the sky for thoughtful sons-in-law then Ray Stark has certainly earned himself a corner lot with a heated swimming pool through his devotion to the memory of his late mother-in-law, Fanny Brice.

Funny Lady continues what a press release refers to as "the saga" of Miss Brice, begun in Funny Girl, with all of the solemnity and attention to ritual that you might expect in the dramatization of a Norse legend. Herbert Ross was the director and Jay Presson Allen and Arnold Schulman wrote the screenplay but one suspects that the real auteurs of Funny Lady were Miss Streisand, Stark and the millions and millions of dollars earned by the original film, which has been copied even down to the new songs (by John Kander and Fred Ebb) and a lot of the lighting and camera angles.

Omar Sharif reprises his role as Nicky Arnstein and James Caan plays Billy Rose who, in middle years, treated Fanny as badly as Nicky did in her youth. The drama is absurd but a lot of the musical numbers, particularly the comic ones, are first-rate.

The Great Waldo Pepper is more than just likeable. Its hugely appealing even as you become aware that it seams to be a movie in search of itself. The original story by director George Roy Hill (screenplay by William Goldman) is about a former First World War pilot named Waldo Pepper (Robert Redford), who barnstorms around the middle west in the late '20s trying to make a living and fabricating legends of his wartime exploits. How he finally achieves glory makes for a fascinating twist, but by the time the movie reaches this point you get the feeling it's been dawdling between the beginning and the end. The Great Waldo Pepper seems sort of unfinished, like a Broadway show that needs more time on the road.

The Great Waldo Pepper is a lot less smooth and classy than two other Hill films that starred Redford (Butch Cassidy and The Sundance Kid tnd The Sting) but it exhibits an affection for — and generosity toward — fanatics (in this case, fliers) that make it not only very appealing but probably the most personal film Hill has ever made.

Festival Highlights Monday

The highest calibre performances in 25 years throughout the Greater Victoria Music Festival, which concludes this weekend, promise a singularly fine festival highlights concert Monday.

The event, taking place at McPherson Playhouse beginning at 8 p.m., will feature outstanding artists and major prize-winning performers in several categories.

Only spaces left on the program will be filled when the junior, intermediate and open piano championships — the latter will be the Victoria City Medallion winner — are decided tonight at Newcombe Auditorium.

Many of the young artists will also be representing Victoria in provincial championship classes in Vancouver at the end of May.

Among those participating in the program are Joyce Kopan and Ron Sharman in a flute duet; junior vocal champion Peter Butterfield; an outstanding harpist who is the first ever to appear in the festival, Karen Himmelman; speech artist Veronica Cooper; baritone Brian Benn, who got the highest mark in oratorio; Rosebowl winner Pierann Moon; open performance piano winner Lorna Paterson and classical guitarist S. Woo Wong.

What is thought to be another "first" for this festival is the fact that Rolf Gilstein holds a dual championship for both cello and accordian and will be representing the city in both at the provincial festival. He will appear on the highlights program as a cellist.

Among those who achieved marks in the high 90s were young violin duettist Mark Neumann and David Lowe and they too will be appearing on the program.

The concert will open with a performance by the Cantabile Singers conducted by Madeleine Groos, and a representative from the ballet-dance classes will also add a note of variety.

As most awards have already been made the evening will be almost totally musical.

AMONG performers at Monday's highlights program will be soprano Pierann Moon, left, pianist Lorna Paterson and harpist Karen Himmelman.

Jimi Back from Ghostly Limbo

By JERRY HOPKINS

ROLLING STONE

It's not unprecedented for a dead man to sell records. But while Jim Croce's popularity didn't flag after his death in a plane crash, the late Jimi Hendrix has returned from a ghostly limbo.

Almost completely ignored in recent years, the black guitarist who helped change the sound of rock in the psychedelic '60s and died in London in 1970 is back near the top. The first 250,000 copies of Crash Landing, his posthumous album released in March, sold out in a month, and by April fans were buying 70,000 copies a week. Hendrix even appeared as a "guest" on an installment of "Rock Concert." In a world becoming increasingly bizarre, a dead man is making a comeback—with an album recorded nearly four years after his passing!

This is how it was done. In the last year or so of his life, Hendrix spent hundreds, perhaps thousands of hours in the studio, laying down tracks with dozens of friends, including John McLaughlin guitarist-leader of the Mahavishnu Orchestra. When he died, the tapes went into storage in New Jersey.

Over the next few years, the Hendrix estate (his father, in Seattle, represented by lawyers in New York) submitted material to Warner Bros. Records from another source. Though these takes became Cry of Love, Hendrix in the West and War Heroes, the overall submissions were, according to Warner executive Don Schmitzerle, so spotty that, "For every one we accepted, we must have rejected two."

Then in 1974, Schmitzerle called Alan Douglas, a New York producer who'd been associated with a number of jazz artists, had released a posthumous Lenny Bruce album, and had worked with Hendrix in the studio during the last year of his life. Douglas was given the chore of collecting Hendrix sessions from all over the map — "wherever I could find them" — to come up with something worthy of the Hendrix name. Taking 637 tapes totalling nearly 500 hours of music and songs to Stockbridge, Massachusetts, Douglas listened and made notes for four months. When his plan to release some tracks with McLaughlin was frustrated by the Mahavishnu's contractual unavailability, he hatched a riskier plot.

"I listened and listened," Douglas recalled over the phone from New York, "and one day it was clear what I had to do. Jimi's rhythm guitar lines were working, his leads were working, he had good vocals and the tunes themselves made it. The trouble was, on most of the songs, the other musicians weren't making it. When everybody else was messing up and going out of time, Jimi held right in there. Consequently, when I stripped everything else off the 16-track tapes, we at least had Jimi to work with."

A question remained: Who was going to "work with" Hendrix? On Message of Love and With the Power, Douglas did not delete sidemen Buddy Miles and Billy Cox, the drummer and bassist who with Hendrix had formed the Band of Gypsies that followed the original Jimi Hendrix Experience. But on the other six songs, lesser-known session musicians were hired to play along with the tape machine.

Among the men picked for this unusual task were Jeff Mironov, a guitarist from New Jersey who'd backed Gladys Knight, Richie Havens, Sha No Na and Dionne Warwicke; Bob Babbit, a bassist from Detroit who'd played with Motown acts like Stevie Wonder, Marvin Gaye and Diana Ross; and Alan Schwartzenberg, a jazz drummer from New York who'd switched to rock and pop supporting Harry Chapin, Gladys Knight, Tony Orlando and Dawn, James Brown and Judy Collins.

HENDRIX
. . . posthumous record

All of them agreed that the sessions were spooky. First the bass and drum tracks were cut, with Babbit and Schwartzenberg jamming to the Hendrix tracks without rehearsal. Guitarist Mironov was brought in, then came a percussionist and, for one track, three backup singers. All had respected Hendrix and all reported it unnerving to be accompanying the ghostly guitar and voice.

"I mean," guitarist Mironov said, "I've always been a fan of his. But it was freaky. I tried to make my guitar sound like the way he played it. We wanted to finish the album the way he would've finished it."

Babbit, the bassist, remembered how he and the drummer had prepared the record by listening carefully to one of the tracks, making notes of all the changes in meter. In the studio, they both made one of those changes perfectly, but Hendrix didn't do it with them. They tried it again, and again Hendrix failed to make the change. Babbit said he though Hendrix was playing a trick on them. Then he remembered it was only a tape.

"It was a great experience playing with him," Babbit said, "even though he didn't hear us."

Once Warners had a finished Crash Landing on hand, it was confident enough to recall the other albums it had issued after Hendrix death. Crash Landing's success should guarantee that further R 'n' B-flavored albums will be made with "rediscovered" Hendrix material.

Only one of the session musicians on the "new album" had ever met Hendrix. In 1967, when Hendrix was enjoying his post-Monterey Pop Festival fame at New York's fashionable club, the Scene, Alan Schwartzenberg was drumming for Mose Allison

"We used to talk," Schwartzenberg recalled. "Once he said he'd like us to play together sometime. Every musician says that all the time, y'know. So I didn't pay any attention. And now 10 years later . . ."

THE FOUR MUSKETEERS

An Aristocratic Piece of Slapstick

A Film Review
By Nora Hutchison

Originally, Richard Lester planned his film version of Dumas' classic The Three Musketeers as a single release — an all-star extravaganza in the grand manner. But after Lester had assembled a wonderful cast of beauties, comics and straightmen, he obviously felt compelled to use their talents fully — and shot enough footage for two movies. The commercial possibilities for the release of a two-part epic adventure movie were evident to Lester and his producers, so he simply cut the movie in half. This bit of post-production trickery scarcely disturbs the story's pace because Lester provides a quick rehash of the plot-so-far, before proceeding with his chaotic interpretation of Monsieur Dumas' famous tale.

The 1974 film was all pratfalls and swashbuckling swordplay — a bawdy adventure in which a young country bumpkin named D'Artagnan (Michael York) proved his determination to become a musketeer. Along the way, he picked up a lovely mistress, the utterly beautiful and unbelievably clumsy Queen's dressmaker (Raquel Welch); became party to court intrigue at its highest levels as the go-between for the Queen and her English lover, Lord Buckingham; and caught the attention of the deadly Milady (Faye Dunaway), professional enchantress and spy for Cardinal Richelieu (Charlton Heston).

HESTON
. . . surprise

In Part II, The Four Musketeers, D'Artagnan joins forces with the famous three, portrayed by Oliver Reed, Richard Chamberlain and Frank Findlay, and is immediately catapulted into battle, defending the crown against a rebellion that seems certain to topple King Louis XIII from his throne. Away from the skirmishes, D'Artagnan carries on amorous affairs with his mistress and other lissome ladies until he and his seamstress become pawns in Milady's game for power. Amid the ruckus of battle and intrigue, D'Artagnan grows up — exchanging his boyish charm for an air of authority — and finally outwits even the cunning Richelieu.

Much of the movie's charm lies in its slapstick, anachronistic vision of the period. The musketeers debauch with the same elegant zeal they employ in their sword-play, — and only occasionally trip over their long swords or slide in the mud. Lester excels at a sort of highspeed comedy that moves from narrative point to narrative point in leaps and bounds, with short stops on the way for moments of farcical nonsense. It's fun on the most basic, low-comedy, pie-in-the-face level. In one such moment, a rebel firing squad takes great pains to load and aim their rifles (they're not yet used to their new weapons) only to discover that their aide can't decide how to tie the prisoner's blindfold around the patch he wears over one eye. Before the aide has thought it all out, the prisoner escapes. In another sequence, D'Artagnan and Milady leap out of bed and into a duel with each other. They are wrapped in bedsheets, and Milady brandishes a glass dagger filled with acid. It's our first view of Milady as the real villainess and the scene has a lot of dramatic charge, but Lester turns the duel into a stylized parody of all such encounters. Milady thrusts her dagger wildly while trying not to trip over her sheet; D'Artagnan tries to hold her off with whatever comes to hand, and then gives up and makes a run for it.

Lester has a highly inventive gift for characterization, and a particular affinity for the underdog. Roy Kinnear as the musketeer's manservant endures their nagging orders while he struggles after them, weighed down with weapons and lunch. Kinnear, who always looks close to tears, is like the perennial fat boy who can't keep up with his swifter school chums, and as Milady, Faye Dunaway is a terrific villainess. She flounces her curls haughtily, swishes her hems in irritation, and plots the demise of her victims in her bath. But Charlton Heston is the surprise of the movie. He plays Cardinal Richelieu with great humor and style. Once in a while though, he looks slightly askance at the camera, as if he can't quite believe he's been assigned such a shady character.

Overall, The Four Musketeers is an aristocratic piece of slapstick adventure in the tradition of the best of pop fantasy.

DUMBELLS STILL KICKING

TORONTO (CP) — When 87-year-old Jerry Brayford talks about being "bombed nightly," he isn't referring to being drunk, he is describing his experiences as one of the famed Dumbells of the First World War.

Brayford, who now lives in Enderby, B.C., Jack Ayre, 80, and Bill Redpath, 84, both of Toronto, and Jack McLaren, 79, of Goderich, Ont., are the only four of 16 original Dumbells still alive.

They are staging a combination reunion-performance this week with the help of CBC's Fresh Air show, a weekend radio show. They were to perform today at Lambert Lodge, once a hospital for veterans and now an old folks home.

The Dumbells emerged from the trenches of France in 1917, led by Capt. Mert Plunkett, to perform comedy and musical skits for battle-worn Canadian and allied troops within shooting distance of the front lines.

Somehow, the group helped turn terror and loneliness into laughter using such material as The Dumbell Rag: "If anyone here has the blues, his bloomin' blues he will lose . . . ."

Ayre, the peppery, cigar-smoking pianist who wrote The Dumbell Rag, keeps fit by performing at least twice a week at service clubs.

McLaren, the group's youngster, wrote many of the original skits that were first acted out on a 20-foot stage in crude wooden huts.

Brayford was one of the CBC's earliest performers and Redpath studied voice after the war and made his debut as a solo baritone singer at Toronto's Massey Hall.

McLaren said performing within a few miles of the front lines had its problems.

He described one performance that was interrupted by a poison-gas alert. Performers and the audience all donned gas masks and waited. Thirty minutes later, the all-clear sounded. Off came the masks and on went the show.

"We were bombed nightly," added Brayford.

What made The Dumbells so popular to both soldiers and later general audiences?

Their name didn't hurt. It was taken from the 3rd Canadian Divisional Concert Party's insignia — a dumbell on a French grey divisional patch. The dumbell signified silence and strength and the patch meant they were the only British division formed on French soil.

The group performed until 1932, including 12 cross-Canada tours, a stint on Broadway in 1921 and also in London.

The key to their success was making people laugh, said McLaren.

Much of the skit humor came from simply depicting the average soldier's life, complete with its absurdities.

And what the women-starved soldiers really enjoyed were performances by female impersonators such as Dumbells Ross Hamilton and Alan Murray.

McLaren said the group's excitement at being together again is so intense, "we can't keep our feet on the floor."

"When I saw that old dink (Brayford) come in I got a lump in my throat. I hadn't seen Jerry since 1925."

RED DEER (CP) — Members of the Amalgamated Transit Union in five provinces will vote May 21 on a contract offer from Greyhound Bus Lines.

Bus drivers, major depot ticket agents, baggage handlers, express staff and bus maintenence staff will be affected by the vote.

A union representative in British Columbia said in a telephone interview that drivers from B.C. and as far east as Thunder Bay now get $3.50 to $4 an hour but are seeking between $6.50 and $7. The drivers are also seeking improved sickness benefits and earlier retirement.

Realistic Approach to Culture

The yardstick question to be applied by any person or group seeking government assistance under the new B.C. Cultural Program is simple:

Are you sure what you are doing or proposing to do is needed by the community?

This is the essence of the matter, according to Thomas Fielding, who is at present shake-down cruising in an ocean of surveys, reports and briefs while becoming established in the role of executive director of the program.

A sympathetic ear, for example, is not likely to be given to a group of artists wishing to form an organization without substantial indication that the community desires it.

Fielding, 39, a self-styled realist and pragmatist, comes to the B.C. position from four years as administrator of the Hamilton Philharmonic Orchestra.

Previous to that appointment he worked for six years with the Saskatchewan Arts Board.

This background, he points out, has meant that he has had experience on both sides of the desk — as a seeker after and a provider of aid.

The biggest problem, he feels, is one of communication between the seekers and the granters.

"Briefs seldom give either enough information or the right kind. Too many aspects are left unstated," he says, "or the wrong things are given emphasis."

As illustration he offers the fact that Canada Council is not too much interested in an orchestra's in-school or out-of-town concerts, but in how many sell-outs it has during a season and the size of its subscription list.

In other words, how solid the community support is.

Fielding is not a newcomer to B.C. He knows the province from having lived in various areas of it, including Smithers and Prince Rupert. He has returned — gladly — to find a tremendously increased arts activity everywhere, not just in the metropolitan centres.

But the changes are dramatic there too.

A lot has happened in a relatively short time, he says. In the 40s and 50s "when I was growing up in Vancouver's east end for instance there was no such thing as a Vancouver East Cultural centre."

The need for a program to give direction, aid and focus to all this phenomenal artistic energy is great, he feels.

Terms of reference for his office include co-ordination of government inter-department cultural activity to avoid duplication which up to now has occurred quite often; advice on allocation of grants; administration of regional aspects of the arts.

"People of the province now have one central office and one person from which to obtain information and through whom to request assistance in the area of the arts," he says, "and this we must let them know as quickly as possible."

When Access to the Arts was published as a report on the feasibility of the provincial policy a year ago, some people expressed fear that the result would be a take-over by bureaucracy and resultant unwieldiness.

Fielding expects that quite the reverse will be the case; that there will be faster communication on an on-going basis and more immediate knowledge of what is needed in all parts of the province.

They suggested that regional arts panels as outlined in the report will come under the watchful eye of the director and will not be permitted to become top-heavy or power-structured.

"If they turn out to be made up with any kind of 'political' overtones we'll scrap them and start again," says Fielding.

"Acess to the Arts provided us with a necessary feedback," he points out, "but it must be carefully studied. Some it it is much too idealistic and requires putting in the proper perspective."

It is, he feels, an unedited version of "everyone's opinion."

As far as community arts councils are concerned, he maintains that they still have validity as advisers to regional panels. At times they will be dealing directly with the program.

In a nutshell, Fielding's office with regard to grants, will be concerned with professional requirements and the CACs will continue to deal with recreational level.

The new executive director would like to see some changes in the present per capita basis of grants given to community arts councils for dissemination. He thinks the grants should be related more to projects or expansion.

"Not all the really exciting or innovative things happen in the big centres," he says. He points to the enormous increase of artistic activity in Smithers and the intense stirrings in the Comox Valley as indication that thre is sometimes more expansion and adventure in off-the-beaten-track areas than in cities.

"Possibly one way would be to maintain a basic per capita grant but then to provide "incentive" grants for community projects of a special kind," he feels.

Artisits in their relationship to the community, establihsed organizations and young people studying the arts, are vital — "they are our resource material," Fielding says.

Behind his big desk in the neat bungalow that is his office at 466 Superior Street, Tom Fielding radiates energy and directness. You know it is the simple truth when he tells you that he is a realist, that he is accustomed to dealing with the nitty-gritty and with artists on a nose-to-nose basis.

He says the B.C. Arts Program must continue to support and provide for the young, potential artists; that he looks forward to the possible increasing of the government's scholarship program.

He beams with satisfaction over the just released announcement that the B.C. government has doubled its basic grant of $100 per centre to the province's music festival and will also increase its grant of 60 cents per entrant to $1 in 1976.

On a different tack, he has sound advice concerning the relationship between administrators and artistic directors of arts organizations:

"A good relationship must exist — a mutual respect," he emphasizes. The administrator, having received his instructions from his board, and with budget figures established, must be able to sit down with the artistic director and debate with him the details of the proposed program.

"He must say in effect, show me. Tell me why you wish to do this particular play rather than other; why you wish to engage that particular guest artist or why it is desirable to perform this music which demands an expanded orchestra."

Stares, Shrugs On Altered Anthem

elizabeth forbes

Every once in a while when I sing O Canada, the thought crosses my mind that a few years back a bill was presented in the House of Commons at Ottawa that cut much of the repetition out of our national anthem and provided some slightly amended words.

Yet, I have never heard that fact mentioned or the new words sung, at any time.

At a luncheon meeting the other day, I spoke about this seeming lack of interest. Only to be greeted with a few blank stares, one or two shrugs and a question as to whether I knew the suggested changes and the proposed new words.

I had to confess I couldn't say off-hand. However, it didn't take me long, once I was home, to go rummaging in my files and to turn up news clippings I saved at the time.

The bill was introduced by Gerard Pelletier when he was Canada's Secretary of State.

It did not amend any act of Parliament because O Canada had never had parliamentary sanction.

The new version was presented as follows:

"O Canada! Our home and native land!
True patriot love in all thy sons command.
With glowing hearts we see thee rise,
The True North strong and free!
From far and wide, O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.
God keep our land glorious and free!
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee."

It eliminated two of the five "stand-on guard" phrases in the anthem.

Instead of the first "stand on guard", the words from far and wide" were substituted, and for the third "stand on guard" was substituted "O Canada".

In another place "God keep our land" was substituted for "O Canada."

The bill changed the English words but did not appear to change the usual French version. Music was to remain the same.

In essence the bill said: (1) That the act could be cited as the National Anthem Act. (2) The words and music of the song O Canada as set out in the schedule were designated as the national anthem of Canada. (3) The words and music of the national anthem of Canada were declared to be in the public domain.

That's it! There isn't any more! Except to wonder why we haven't accepted the new version and why, by now, we are not using it.

After all, it is a far more sensible wording and has a lot more in it than the one we seem loathe to give up.

AN IWY WIN — Appropriately, in this International Women's Year, Italian wives have finally gained full legal equality with their husbands.

A recent news report from Rome (which as yet, I have not seen in the local press) tells that after seven years of debate, parliament there has finally passed a new code to replace a century-old law that gave the husband the right to make all key decisions in the family.

All political parties except the extreme right-wing Italian Social Movement voted in favor of the bill when it passed its last hurdle in the Justice Commission of the lower house.

The new law does away with the ancient Roman concept of "patriapotestas" (the authority of the father) under which the husband had the sole right to decide, for example, even which school a child should attend.

In France — Secretary of State for Women's Affairs Francoise Giroud is fighting to stamp out publicity showing women in a bad light.

Mme. Giroud has named two women to the French State Commission for the control of advertising as part of her campaign to improve the lot of French women. She has also said school textbooks will be revised to eliminate stereotypes by which children are led to believe women are inferior to men.

Other new measures include increased aid to pregnant women and the opening of information centres on contraceptives.

She has also promised that laws which forbid women to work at night will be revised and that jobs reserved for men in government service will be open to women.

Grant to Aid Folk Projects

Ethnic dance workshops and classes in Ukrainian embroidery and other folk art will be some of the results offered in Victoria with the aid of a $10,000 federal government multi-culturalism grant received by the Inter-Cultural Association of Greater Victoria.

Some of the 22 member clubs have already submitted workshop ideas to association secretary-treasurer Ruth Ilnytsky.

"The purpose will be for each club to maintain their heritage and culture and to develop it in the Canadian context," said Ilnytsky.

She estimated one-quarter of Victoria's population has roots in countries other than Canada and said the 22 groups represent thousands of Victorians.

The Inter-cultural Association co-ordinates activities of the groups and is affiliated with the Esperanto international language group as well as international dance companies in the Victoria area.

Formed in 1971, the association has grown from a band of 10 ethnic groups to its current size. It began when cultural groups got together for Greater Victoria Centennial celebrations and staged an international fun fair at the Crystal Gardens.

Announcement of the grant — already sent by cheque to Ilnytsky — was made recently by Hon. John Munro, minister responsible for multiculturalism.

Clay Baker Pork Chops

By MARY MOORE

Clay baker cookery is becoming popular especially with our career cooks. If you have an automatically timed oven you are home free for your whole dinner is enclosed in the baker and simmers for hours.

However the one we are giving you today requires a little attention during its baking period.

CLAY BAKER PORK CHOP DINNER

Four 1" thick pork chops
2 tbsp. oil
½ green pepper, slivered
5 medium carrots, washed, pared and coined
4 medium potatoes pared and diced
4 medium cooking onions, chopped
½ small turnip pared and diced
1 tomato, chopped (optional)
1 tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper
2 beef bouillon cubes
1¾ c. hot water
1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
¼ c. cold water
2 tbsp. corn starch

In frying pan brown pork chops on both sides in oil. (Do not trim off fat as it adds flavor to the finished dish.)

Meanwhile prepare all vegetables and place in bottom of water-soaked clay baker. Sprinkle with the salt and pepper and toss to combine.

Place browned pork chops on top of vegetables.

Dissolve beef bouillon cubes in hot water. Add Worcestershire sauce and stir.

Make a paste of the corn starch and cold water and stir into the beef bouillon mixture. Pour liquid evenly all over top of chops and vegetables. Cover with clay baker lid. Bake at 300 deg. Fahr. 1 hour then reduce heat to 275 deg. Fahr. for another 2 hours. Once every hour remove from oven and toss vegetables.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I read your column all the time and usually agree with you, but the answer you gave the mother who had a running battle with her teen-age children because they wouldn't keep their rooms picked up is wrong. Dead wrong!

I am a 16-year-old boy who came to live with my father and stepmother last summer. Before I came here, I had to jump from my door to the bed (if I could see it). Now, my room is so neat and orderly, it looks like the operating rooms of a hospital.

I fought it as long as I could, but my stomach and my stepmother finally won. I got no breakfast until my bed was made. She put a clothes basket in my closet, and nothing got laundered unless it was in that basket. Everything left on the floor went into a "mess box" in the garage, and I had to go there to retrieve it, which was a lot of trouble. On my day for the car, unless my room was vacuumed, no keys!

I'm glad my stepmother didn't do what you advised that other mother to do ("Say no more, keep their doors closed, and enter their rooms only to change the beds, and rake it once a week. When they get tired of living in that mess, they'll clean it up. Until then, don't let them aggravate you. It's not worth it.")

Want to know something, Abby? I've come to like it this way. I can take my friends into my room now.

PROUD OF ROOM

DEAR PROUD: Since your stepmother's formula worked with you, it's worth recommending. Thank her for hatching the idea, and thank you for sharing it.

DEAR ABBY: Why is it that widows aren't asked over to their sisters' homes for a visit now and then? Are they afraid we might steal husbands?

Nonsense! I don't want anyone's husband, but I notice that when someone in the family has a birthday or a shower, I am first on the list. I am called and asked to please pick up this or that because "You have the time."

It would be so nice to be invited over just once for a visit (I don't mean for dinner) on a Sunday or an evening just because someone wanted my company.

I never thought this could happen to me but it did. Then my sister said: "If anything happens to my husband, I'll move in with you."

I thought: "NEVER!"

ANOTHER WIDOW

DEAR WIDOW: If she says it again, why don't you say it aloud? It would do you a lot of good to say it. And her, to hear it.

The Wonderful World of Animals

By FRANK MILLER

Dear Dr. Miller: Baby, (actually it's big baby now), is my pet Jersey cow. I raised her from a newborn calf and we're very attached to each other. Still, my husband wants something out of all the grain and hay he's feeding her and has suggested milk. I don't want her bred. It might hurt her and there aren't any Jersey bulls around here anyway. My husband's looked. Besides, she hates other cows and I'm sure she'd hate a bull even more. Is there any other way out of this? I mean, what do dairies do when they have a cow who doesn't breed? I'm sure some don't. What do they do when they don't get milk from cows like that?

—J.M.

Dear J.M.: When dairymen are unable to breed dairy cows their usual answer to the problem would be highly unsatisfactory for you and certainly for Big Baby. (Those poor cows have to contribute something; if it isn't milk, it's meat). There's hope on the horizon, however. In about three out of four cows, a series of hormone injections has stimulated production of as much milk (apparently) as though they had gone through the breeding, pregnancy and calving process. Unfortunately, these hormones are not yet commercially available, but possibly your husband would be willing to wait awhile for Big Baby's payoff?

Dear Dr. Miller: I have both dogs and cats and have had in years past, and have noted dogs lick their wounds with great frequency. My cats seldom do this, and cats seem to have more trouble with wounds. Why don't they lick wounds like dogs do? It would save me some, too. I spent a lot of money on cat bills — bite wounds and things like that, you know. —B.B.

Dear B.B.: There are other factors involved, but one primary reason that cats lick less is because their tongue is considerably less soothing than a dog's. If a cat has ever licked your face, for example, you're aware, I'm sure, of the spine-like projections on the surface of the tongue which could hardly prove soothing to a highly sensitive surface such as wound. With or without licking, however, a cat's wounds are more prone to be infected than a dog's, as they are more frequently deep punctures which tend to seal over, preventing drainage and encouraging development of infection.

HEAT PROSTRATION

A recent rash of heat prostration patients among cats reminds me to remind you that dogs are not the only pets suffering from heat stroke or heat exhaustion. Dogs are most frequently a victim (a) when left in a parked, overheating car, or (b) as a result of severe exercise during high temperatures and, most particularly, concurrent high humidity. Cats will seldom overexercise in hot weather unless forced to, a cat's body temperature can climb within a few minutes to dangerous levels if the cat's in a car or in a small, poorly-ventilated carrier. Caged birds and rodents are frequently left out in the broiling sun and are very likely to succumb quickly unless rescued. Even the sun-loving reptile must have access to shade. All species need access to water during hot weather. A dog or cat who is travelling should have water frequently or, preferably, constantly available.

Dear Dr. Miller: Now that we've put our goldfish back in the outside pool do they need any different food than they did inside, or does it make any difference? —D.D.

Dear D.D.: The quality and quantity of the food offered can always make a difference in the health of a fish. In an outside pool, they will be more active, require correspondingly more food and, preferably, food with higher protein content. Obviously, though, they are likely to supplement their diet with such high protein sources as insects alighting on the water. This could make up for the difference in their requirements. Overfeeding in the outside pool should also be avoided. The pool would take longer to become foul by overfeeding, but you'd also be less likely to notice undesirable changes in the water until perhaps it was too late.

Dear Dr. Miller: Just like to pass along a tip to other dog owners who might have had the same kind of trouble. I used to bathe mine in all different kinds of soap and they always caused skin irritation. Then I hit upon something recommended for women and I started bathing Heidi's hair in raw egg yolk. The hair comes out soft and glossy and her skin is never irritated.

E.J.

Dear E.J.: Fortunately, collie and English sheepdog owners don't usually bathe their dogs too often anyway.

Free for the Asking

Money can't buy happiness, but it can get many things that make misery more bearable. Therefore save some money for the rainy days!

The folder It's Your Money offers practical tips how to budget. It recommends that you keep track of all income, expenses and savings for at least one month and guide yourself accordingly. A family budget worksheet is provided for the purpose.

The folder also urges you to plan a regular savings program for the things you want and for unexpected emergencies. Deposit all your income in a chequing account and arrange with the bank to transfer regular amounts to your savings account. Withdraw a fixed number of dollars on the same day of each week and make it last.

You are also warned not to let anybody stampede you into a hot deal in a hurry. A good deal can wait until the next morning.

Be careful not to sign any contract which you have not read carefully and which you don't fully understand. And don't let anybody switch contracts on you. If he takes it away for an OK after you have read it, read it again when he brings it back to be sure it is the same one.

Don't forget that credit costs money. Anything you buy for cash is less expensive than when you buy it on credit.

The folder, which is cosponsored by the Federated Council of Sales Finance Companies and the Canadian Consumr Loan Association, is available from: Credit Information, P.O. Box 144, Station Q, Toronto, Ontario M4T 2L7. Please allow at least 2-3 weeks for delivery.

Welch Medical Report

Dr. William J. Welch, one-half of the writing team for the Alvarez-Welch Medical Report, has taken over the complete writing duties of this column.

Dr. Walter C. Alvarez, who has been co-authoring the feature with Dr. Welch, will be spending his working time reading and studying.

Dr. Welch is a specialist in internal medicine and cardiology, practicing in New York City.

He has a medical knowledge gained from 30 years of practice and believes that people, be they readers or patients, deserve a clear line of communication with physicians.

In addition to discussing common ailments in his three-times-columns on the Times Family pages Tuesdays, Fridays and Saturdays, Dr. Welch will emphasize heart diseases, the number-one killer of man today, and medical consumerism.

Dr. Welch received degrees from Yale and from the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia University. Presently he maintains a special practice in internal medicine and cardiology in New York. He is an associate professor of clinical medicine and former chief of the cardiac clinic in a major hospital, has served as director of the New York Cardiac Centre, and as a director and later president of the New York Heart Association.

Stupor, coma and death due to acute alcoholic hepatitis (inflammation of the liver) is one of the most dreaded complications of alcoholism. At the University of North Carolina School of Medicine, a well-controlled study strongly supports the effectiveness of prednisolone, a cortisone derivative, in cutting down the death rate of this poorly understood disease.

There were only three deaths among 16 seriously ill patients treated with prednisolone. In a control group of 12 patients treated with every known supportive measure except prednisolone, all 12 died.

At first it was thought that the prednisolone simply made it possible for patients to eat more, which is known to affect alcoholic hepatitis favorably. When increasing the caloric intake alone was tried, without the prednisolone, however, none of the patients survived.

How prednisolone works its salutary effect is not understood, and more studies must be done, but the results so far are more encouraging than any treatment now known for this dreaded complication of alcoholism.

REDUCING DEATH

Examination every two or three years by means of a slim, lighted tube (sigmoidoscope), which allows direct vision of the rectum and lower bowel, could all but eliminate death from rectal cancer in persons over 45, the ones who are at the greatest risk of succumbing to this form of cancer.

More than 18,000 patients have been examined in this way over a period of 25 years by doctors at the University of Minnesota Medical Centre in Minneapolis, with a reduction of 85 per cent in the normally expected cases of large-bowel cancer.

Early growths can be detected while they are localized, and removed by local excision through the examining tube.

In addition to the annual sigmoidoscopic examination, each subject in this study received a periodic general examination as well.

EAR LOBES AND HEART

An oblique crease crossing the ear lobe, the lowermost flap of the external ear, has been found by a group at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minnesota, to be statistically associated with the presence of heart disease. The crease was present in 133 out of 144 patients.

Among the 11 patients who did not have ear creases, 10 had normal heart arteries. Of the 133 with ear creases, 90 per cent had evidence of hardening of their coronary arteries.

One of the doctors concludes: "If a patient is a man over 45 with chest pain and other symptoms of heart trouble but no ear crease, there would be a 91 per cent chance of his not having coronary artery disease. If he had the crease, however, it is nine to one he'd have coronary artery disease."

TENSION BUFFALOED BY BUSY SURGEON

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — While Dr. Willoughby Belch puts in a busy day in his surgery, he often reflects on the empire he is building at home where the buffalo roam.

In his spare hours, Dr. Belch works on his 200-acre ranch where he has visions of building up a large buffalo population for gourmet dining.

Dr. Belch, 47, says he likes to work around machinery and "get out in the fresh air."

"I have a busy medical practice and before the buffalo, I used to come home and lie down, I'd be so tired. Now, I come home, get into my old clothes and get working.

"It helps me unwind, and I feel better."

Dr. Belch's ranch, which has about 60 head, is the largest privately-owned buffalo ranch in Canada.

He got into the business in 1968, a year after the federal government allowed private citizens to own and sell buffalo.

He said he first tasted buffalo about 20 years ago in Montreal.

"I thought it was so good, it should be available to buy.

"I have this vision. There's going to be a great demand for buffalo when people find out how good it is."

At a sale on the ranch last month, buffalo roasts sold for $2 a pound, round steak $2.25 a pound and hamburger $5 for four pounds.

"Buffalo meat is a gourmet food—it's not something you'd have all the time," Dr. Belch said. "People buy it because it has a little more flavor than beef.

"It also contains 25 per cent more protein and is low in cholesterol."

Buffalo is a staple meat for the Belch family. Mrs. Belch uses buffalo in a variety of dinner menus—steaks, roasts, hamburgers, meatballs, spaghetti sauce, lasagna and soup.

Dr. Belch said he has a healthy respect for his herd.

"Buffalo have been known to kill grizzly bears so it's dangerous for people to drive in and wander around by the fences."

The hay bales are brought into the corral by hand—a task that requires care.

Dr. Belch's son, Tim, 14, recalls hauling hay too close to a young calf for the mother buffalo's liking. She charged.

Running as fast as he could, Tim was about three feet from a fence when he was rammed from behind.

"I missed hitting the top rail by about three inches," he said. "Buffalo, you soon learn, are unpredictable."

State Not People Persecute Jews

OTTAWA (CP) — Anti-semitism in the Soviet Union is official policy but generally does not find expression among Russian people, Dr. Victor Polsky, an immigrant Russian physicist, said Thursday.

Dr. Polsky was given permission to emigrate to Israel by Soviet authorities last November after what he called several months of harassment. He was allowed to leave following a two-day trial for a traffic accident which officials tried to use to send him to prison, he said.

Demonstrations by Ottawa Jewish lawyers in front of the Soviet embassy here assisted him in getting out of the Soviet Union, he said. He met these lawyers, parliamentarians, scientists and academics at a special meeting here Thursday.

Many Jewish professionals want to emigrate to Israel from Russia, he said, but it is more difficult for them than for unskilled Jews.

Physicists have a very difficult time to get an exit permit, he said, but it is easier for mathematicians and biologists to leave.

He said people who apply to emigrate from the Soviet Union find they lose their jobs, friends, and the right of their children to attend school. They also were deprived of their Soviet citizenship.

The Canadian Committee for Soviet Jewry, formed earlier this year, now is active in helping individuals being persecuted because they want to leave Russia. Honorary chairman is Emmett Hall, retired supreme court justice.

Not Even 1 Employee At Trial Gas Station

TORONTO (CP) — Personal service has reached the peak at one city service station where it's only the customer and the computer.

At Shell Canada's experimental credit-card gasoline pump at Lawrence and Dufferin Streets, customers simply insert their credit card into a special device on top of the pump and gasoline begins flowing, courtesy of a mini-computer.

An invoice is printed on the spot by the machine, giving the price, gallonage and the gasoline grade.

For those who wish to pay cash, Shell also provides cash cards. Customers can buy cards, for say $5 worth of gas, and when the card is inserted into the pump, out flows the gasoline.

The pump is the first of its kind in Canada and a Shell spokesman says the experiment will continue for another six months before the company evaluates public acceptance. A similar experiment now is being carried out in California by Atlantic-Richfield.

"It depends whether the public is ready for it," said the spokesman. "But it doesn't waste any time."

Credit-card gasoline costs about the same as at regular self-service stations.

Meanwhile, the United Co-Operatives of Ontario, offers its members key-controlled meters for gasoline pumps.

All members have to do is insert the key, turn it and out comes the gas. Anywhere from 10 to 50 persons can use the pump.

This means members can get gas at any time of the day. The meters are computerized and members receive monthly statements.

A co-op spokesman said the price is about a cent lower than average prices charged at self-serve stations.

New Monument To Apartheid

By LARRY HEINZERLING

CAPE TOWN (AP) — South Africa has begun the creation of a major new monument to apartheid.

An entire city called Atlantis, which will house 500,000 people by the year 2000, is being built near Cape Town exclusively for coloreds, or people of mixed race.

The new city will help ease an acute housing shortage for the Cape Province's 1.7 million coloreds, who are carefully segregated from white residential areas in Cape Town and other cities.

Coloreds are not as strictly segregated as Africans in South Africa because government policy is to allow them "parallel development" with whites while "separate development" is ordained for blacks.

Thousands currently live in shanty towns in an area known as the Cape Flats.

Atlantis will be built from scratch on the plains about 30 miles north of Cape Town.

The creation of Atlantis was announced recently by Jan J. Loots, minister of planning.

FIRST NEW CITY

It is the first totally new and independent city planned in the republic and the first time in the history of South Africa that a city will come into being with schools, hospitals, community centres, playing fields and other facilities all there before the residents themselves arrive," said a government spokesman.

Although affiliated with Cape Town, Atlantis will be a new city with a residential and industrial complex linked to the rest of the western Cape by road and railway, said Loots.

"What we envisage is a balanced city with a happy community in all spheres of life.

"Industry will be asked to play a vital role because if we want people here we will have to provide the necessary job opportunities which will arise out of industrial development."

Industries setting up business in Atlantis will be granted government tax concessions and assistance based on the number of coloreds they employ in their factories.

BEGIN WITH VILLAGES

Loots said the first 600 houses will be ready for occupation later this year.

The first communal units will be villages, then towns, each with a population of about 60,000, which will finally be amalgamated into a city.

Atlantis will stand near a plateau overlooking an imposing natural amphitheatre.

The plateau will house the central business district and two large industrial areas totalling about 1,730 acres will be located on the city's fringes.

Atlantis, a legendary island in the Atlantic Ocean, was said to be the seat of a powerful empire around 10000 B.C. which sank into the sea.

The lost city of Atlantis has been a popular literary subject for centruies and has often been associated with an ideal civilization.

DEAR WORRIED:

Your clothes represent a pretty big investment these days. No wonder you're concerned about taking proper care of them. And labels can be confusing. Especially when it comes to knits. Did you know that all knits may shrink some if you tumble them in a clothes dryer? Then, there are materials which may not shrink . . . but the zipper, trim or lining just might! Be sure your knits are thoroughly clean, spot free and retain their original shape and color. Bring them to us, your neighborhood "MARTINIZING" (R) dry cleaner. It's our job to keep all your clothes looking like new. Lasting longer.

Trust us. We're pros.

Provinces Irked At Taxing Roles

WINNIPEG (CP) — Former Manitoba finance minister Saul Cherniack says there is a possibility some provinces will opt out of the federal income tax collection system at the end of 1976.

Speaking to a meeting of the Canadian Life Insurance Association Cherniack said that when the current agreement ends, all provinces will face the hard choice of whether to continue within the national collection system or opt out.

"Based on the discussions at recent finance ministers' conferences, I think there is a real possibility of a return to separate independent provincial administration of income taxation with more rules, provisions and administrative guidelines.

"The fact is that opting out may be inevitable to achieve fairness and to maintain revenues."

Cherniack, who now is legislative assistant to the finance minister, said Ontario is already talking about "repatriating" its tax credit plans and Alberta has announced its intention to end its corporation income tax collection agreement with Ottawa in two or three years.

"There is, however, some reason to believe this kind of action may not be necessary for all provinces.

"The increasing federal willingness to administer different provincial income tax changes, such as selective reductions, tax credits, and so on, may make it more feasible to retain over-all uniformity."

He said the federal government also has accepted provincial representation calling for a review of the formula under which corporate taxable income is allocated among the provinces.

With a continuation of that kind of flexibility and with a realistic adjustment on revenue-sharing to reflect the provincial loss in revenues after 1976, it may be that most provinces will be persuaded of the advantages of remaining in the national collection system.

"But this will require some fairly significant accommodations by the federal government — and soon."

Statue of Pope Smashed

SOTTO IL MONTE, Italy (AP) — Vandals attacked a statue of the Pope John XXIII in his native village before dawn Friday and knocked off its hands and part of the body.

The statue, made of plaster of paris, had become a landmark for tens of thousands of pilgrims who annually visit this town, nead Milan, to honor late pope.

CLEAR WIN FOR ANTS

By JANE E. BRODY

NEW YORK (NYT) — The U.S. Department of Agriculture has decided to abandon its war against the fire ant, a tiny but aggressive and seemingly invincible pest to people and agriculture in the Southeast.

The cancellation was announced amid charges that the department's control program was more political than practical and that it resulted in contomination of the environment with a persistent pesticide that kills fish and may cause cancer.

The agriculture department said it would suspend the fire ant program as of June 30 because restrictions imposed by the Environmental Protection Agency, limiting the number and scope of aerial sprayings with the pesticide Mirex, had made the program "unworkable."

The decision has led to an unusual acrimonious interchange between top officials of the two agencies. The conflict illustrated the difficulties inherent in trying to balance the needs of agriculture against efforts to protect the environment, particularly when political and economic factors are as prominently involved as scientific issues.

Dr. Edward O. Wilson, a leading Harvard University biologist who is an expert on ants, noted the unlikelihood of ever wiping out a pest that is widespread in nine states and infests four others.

"The fire ant control program in the South is the Vietnam of entomology. It's time to let the taxpayers off," he said.

Efforts to control the fire ant — an imported pest so named for the severe burning sensation that accompanies its sting — began in 1958. The Co-operative Federal-state program has cost $148 million to date, with more than $16 million being spent this year. The program has been politically popular in the South because the Federal monies are spent through local contracts and because the ant has few friends.

Imported fire ants are similar in size and appearance to ordinary house and garden ants — about one-eighth to one-quarter of an inch long and reddish-brown to black in color. Unlike ordinary ants, however, which skitter away when disturbed, fire ants aggressively attack an intruder — be it man or beast — sink their jaws into the flesh and then pivot arond to drive their stingers into the torn skin.

The stings cause little sores and blisters that sometimes become infected. Some people are allergic to ant stings and develop severe reactions that can be life-threatening. Such people can be desensitized to the ant venom, a procedure that is said to be 90 per cent effective in preventing serious reactions to future stings.

The fire ant is most bothersome to people in urban and suburban areas in the Southeast where it infests lawns, parks and schoolyards as well as agricultural fields.

The ant has also been said to threaten livestock, but there is little if any documented evidence of damage to farm animals. The main agricultural problem caused by the fire ant results from the large mounds erected by the ant colonies.

BATTLE OF ATLANTIC RECALLED

Victoria, like other centres across Canada, will remember the Battle of the Atlantic during the Second World War with a special church parade on Sunday.

The parade will gather on Meares Street at 1:45 p.m., marching from there along Quadra to Christ Church Cathedral.

The special service will begin at 2:35 p.m.

Taking part in the parade will be regular force junior officers from the fleet school in CFB Esquimalt, members of Victoria's naval reserve division, HMCS Malahat; a Royal Canadian Legion color party, Victoria's Rainbow Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps and band, the Admiral Budge Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps of Sidney and the Admiral Rayner Navy League Cadet Corps of Victoria.

Following the service, there will be a march past with base commander Capt. Peter Hinton taking the salute from a dais on Quadra in front of Pioneer Square.

Malahat's commanding officer, Cmdr. Michael Hadley, will be parade commander.

The parade and service is in remembrance of the 1,797 sailors who died during the war.

In Ottawa, the service commemmorating the six-year struggle in the Atlantic will be held at the National War Memorial at 11 a.m. with a parade by Ottawa's naval reserve division HMCS Carleton. The salute will be taken by Vice-Admiral Robert Falls, vice-chief of the defence staff and Canada's senior serving sailor.

The Royal Canadian Navy, small at the outbreak of the war, quickly grew to be the Allies' third largest fleet with 400 ships and more than 95,000 men and women, surpassed only by the United States and Britain.

The RCN and the Royal Navy bore the brunt of the Atlantic struggle.

Winston Churchill once said the U-boat peril was the only thing "that ever really frightened me."

The RCN escorted 25,869 merchant ships eastward between North America and Britain and returned westward with 16,823 ships in convoy.

The peak year for convoys was in 1944 when the RCN sank 16 U-boats.

PERSPECTIVES AND PREJUDICES

Ethics Vs. Permissiveness

By Rev. J. A. DAVIDSON

In these days of free-wheeling experimentation in behavior the Church has a duty to proclaim, clearly and challengingly, the basic Christian ethic. But let me immediately repudiate the notion that the Church should try to operate as a grim, censorious morality squad which assumes that much of what people today like to do is wrong and should be supressed.

The Church has sometimes been a moral bully, assuming that it knows what is best for everyone and trying to impose on all people a harsh and restricing code. The morality-squad image is not what I have in mind when I say that the Church today has a duty to proclaim the basic Christian ethic.

The Christian ethic is essentially an ethic of love, love for and among persons, not an ethic of rules and regulations to be imposed on persons. The standard and dynamic of Christian morality is love, love as the determination to serve the good of others and to recognize the sacredness of every person.

But the Christian ethic is not an ethic of slackness and easy acquiescence, not an ethic whch smiles benevolently at what people do simply because they do it — providing, of course, that they do not tread on my toes while they are doing it. The refusal of the Church to be a morality squad must never be taken as a repudiation of all firm moral judgment.

Serious dangers and errors often creep into the currently fashionable approach to morals whichis variously labelled, "situation ethics," "contextual ethics," "the new morality." Some advocates of this approach seem to suggest that the Church best serves persons by finding reasons for not exercising any kind of firm and specific moral discrimination and by substituting for standards and rules a rather vague notion of love which it is assumed can be applied wisely and instantaneously in any situation which a moral decision is called for.

This approach assumes that moral decision should always be a response to a particular situation and is made by applying love to that situation. This, of course, is far closer to the teaching of Jesus than is any scheme of morality which is simply a system of regulations and prohibitions. But the "situationist" sometimes restricts the context of moral decision by isolating moral situations and building walls around them. It tends to disregard the biblical notion of persons-in-community by isolating moral situations in both time and place.

The context of moral decision should not be artificially narrowed. Each moral situation must be considered in its fullest context. Because of this, rules and regulations — which do come out of human experience — can play a constructive role in morality. They are not to be treated as absolutes, as utterly binding on all persons at all times, but they can be instruments of morality, instruments which must always be tested and directed by love.

Love is delineated in the New Testament, love as personified in Jesus, is the source and the force of the Christian ethic. Traditional moral principles and conventions sometimes do frustrate the full expression of that love — but we must recognize that often they are effective instruments of that love and should not be rejected casually and irresponsibly.

Outspoken Commentator Here to Address Meeting

One of the most-travelled and outspoken Canadian commentators on the Middle East, Dr. A. C. Forrest of Toronto, is in Victoria for the 31st. annual meeting of the British Columbia Conference of the United Church of Canada.

FORREST . . . outspoken

Forrest is editor and publisher of the United Church Observer, which has a circulation of 300,000, and writes the syndicated column, A Cleric Comments.

His most recent trip was to India and Bangladesh. On his return in December he reported the people were being fed by church and other voluntary organizations, as well as the government. Forrest predicted, however, a new crisis would build up in either February or March.

He has written two books: Not Tomorrow, Now (Africa) which as published in 1960 and The Unholy Land, published in 1971.

The latter made the national best seller list and has been published in the United States and in Lebanon.

Forrest will speak at the Sunday afternoon session of the annual meeting in First United Church.

He will also speak at 10 a.m. Sunday morning in Cadboro Bay United Church at

Funds for Aircraft Urged for Housing

TORONTO—A committee of the United Church wants the Canadian government to forego replacement aircraft for CF 100, 104 and CF 5 tactical and interceptor aircraft and put the money into homes for native Canadian families instead.

Rev. Clarke MacDonald, secretary of the church's committee on international affairs, has forwarded to James Richardson, minister of defence, a resolution passed last week to the effect that the replacements under consideration by his department—the American F-15 and YF-16 will cost between ten and fifteen million dollars each.

"Competent authorities maintain there is no justification on the basis of national strategic priorities for such expenditures," says the resolution.

It adds: "The expenditures on these aircraft could, instead, contribute substantially to the alleviation of social conditions in Canada. For example the cost of just one of these aircraft equals the cost of not less than five hundred new, fully serviced homes for native Canadian families."

In his letter to the defence minister, Dr. MacDonald asked that the Canadian government "put an immediate end to any consultations or negotiations regarding the purchase of replacement tactical and intereceptor aircraft."

The church's division of mission in Canada was also asked by the international affairs committee to recommend to the federal government that it allocate funds equivalent to those used for NORAD and related defence expenditures to meet pressing social needs in Canada."

NO MORE MEN BEFORE WOMEN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bishop William Creighton of the Episcopal Diocese of Washington has announced that he will not ordain any more men to the priesthood until church leaders also permit him to ordain women.

In a letter to fellow bishops across the country, Bishop Creighton said that "to ordain men who are deacons while being compelled to refuse ordination to women who are deacons has become conscientiously impossible and a form of injustice of which I can no longer be a part."

The deaconate, normally the first step to the Episcopal priesthood, has been open to women since 1970, but the church has never sanctioned the ordination of a woman to the priesthood.

The question is to be considered by national church leaders at their General Convention in September, 1976, but Bishop Creighton repeated an earlier pledge that he will begin ordaining women after that, no matter what the convention decides.

United Church Delegates Gather for Conference

About 550 delegates from across the province are attending the 51st annual meeting of the British Columbia Conference of the United Church of Canada in Victoria.

The meeting began at First United Church on Friday and continues until Tuesday.

The delegates represent 10 presbyteries and more than 340 congregations.

This is the fifth time in 50 years the meeting has been held in Victoria, the last time being in 1962 when Dr. Norah Hughes now living in Langley, became the first woman conference president elected in Canada.

Dr. Wilbur Howard, moderator of the United Church of Canada will lead the opening sessions each day.

Louise Rose, an American jazz pianist from Philadelphia, is leading the music and singing and will take part in a soul concert following Sunday evening's ordination service.

Syndicated columnist and editor-publisher of the United Church Observer, Dr. A. C. Forrest, is also here from Toronto.

The conference opened Friday evening with a presentation by Dr. Neil Perry of the University of Victoria and Rev. Wes Maultsaid, development education worker for the Anglican, United and Roman Catholic Churches. The evening focussed on changing B.C. lifestyles in the light of global inflation.

Reports to be presented cover a variety of activities and interests undertaken by various committees.

Rev. Jack Shaver and Mrs. Bet Starkey, co-chairmen of the Outreach Committee, report the Inter-Church Council on Poverty (with Presbyterian, Lutheran, United Church, Roman Catholic and Anglican members taking part) has allocated $10,000 to self-help groups in a fight against poverty.

Other concerns of the Outreach committee are low-income housing and native affairs.

Jan Bulman, staff consultant, is seeking a meeting with provincial government officials for the information needed to allow the committee to increase help in the various communities.

Camp co-ordinator Sylvia Haynes reports that about 10,000 people used the church's camps during 1974.

Rev. Gordon Irnai, chairman of the ethnic committee, said the Korean church is the fastest-growing ethnic church on the mainland. Only nine years old, the church is attended by 100 people every Sunday afternoon.

One of the most active groups is the hospital and medical work committee, which has Dr. W. D. Watt as superintendent.

Watt reports 15,000 people in isolated areas of B.C. are served by the church's four acute care hospitals and Hazelton Children's Home.

The annual budget is more than $2 million and the staff, which exceeds 125, includes 32 registered nurses, one dentist and 12 doctors.

Theme of the five-day meeting is Crisis, Heritage and Hope.

SAXOPHONE PLAYER at Pentecostal services Sunday evenings at James Bay Church is none other than Rev. Bob Dobson, minister of the United church in the same building at Menzies and Michigan. At the keyboard is Colleen Carbol, wife of Rev. Reg Carbol conducting the 7:30 p.m. service.

50th Anniversary

Esquimalt's Catholic Women's League celebrated its 50th anniversary this week, and Marjorie Sullivan was welcomed as new president at a gathering at Queen of Peace church hall.

Outgoing president is Sheila Stirling.

Long-time Queen of Peace parish priest Father Lewis MacLellan attended, and mass was offered by Father M. J. McNamara, director of the CWL.

WOMEN'S ORDINATION PROS, CONS HEARD

The contentious issue of women's ordination was the topic of discussion when delegates to the annual Anglican synod met at St. Mary's in Victoria.

Two speakers presented pros and cons for the benefit of the laity and members of clergy who had come from all over Vancouver Island.

Speaking in favor of women ministers was theologian John Baycroft, an expert in the field who was recently commissioned by the national church to study the question.

In opposition to Baycroft was Canon Brian Page of Victoria's St. Barnabas church.

"No vote was taken. It was simply an effort to put forward arguments for and against," said diocese program director Canon Hilary Butler.

The principle of women's ordination has already been passed in the Anglican Church after delegates to a general synod in Regina in 1973 gave it their approval.

No moves will be made in that direction, however, before more discussion at all levels of the Church.

Anglican Synod Hears Barrett Air Views

By ELEANOR BOYLE
Times Staff

Premier Dave Barrettt entertained and piqued more than 200 delegates to the 72nd annual Anglican Synod meeting in St. Mary's Church in Oak Bay.

His frequent reference to both Christians and Jews — he is Jewish — as less then outstanding moralists were alternately greeted with silence and laughter during his 70-minute talk.

"Thirty-five hundred Christians — and a couple of Jews — demonstrated on our lawn because we said people have an obligation to the land and it has one to all of us," he said about Legislative Buildings demonstrations after agricultural land reserve legislation.

"We're not very nice people," he said, explaining a situation in his native Vancouver where persons of many denominations reacted violently against Sikhs wanting to build a temple there.

"We're making progress?" he asked, saying it was our Christian society that invented gas chambers and first put Zippo lighters to thatched roofs as reportedly occurred during American intervention in Indo-Chinese disputes.

"If we don't start changing, somebody will do it for us," he told the clergy and lay synod delegates last week.

A former social worker, he talked about the breakdown of the "pre-nuclear family" in which three or more generations lived together and he called the breakdown an unfortunate one.

"The economic system dictates social structure," he said, with the example that three generations in three separate houses gives industry a chance to sell three washers and dryers rather than one.

Political statements ran throughout his speech.

"We're the ones called godless socialists," he said, but defended the New Democratic Party, saying that party brought religious freedom to trade union legislation, ruling that persons could opt from unions for religious reasons.

He told his audience they should use socialist theory and socialist government to the advantage of the disadvantaged.

"What gives me a tremendous sense of rage is, for example, a nation-wide campaign for crippled children, and we're told if we don't give voluntarily, those children will have nothing.

"We have a moral obligation to those children — and we'd better provide it through our tax dollar," he said.

"And can you imagine a society at this level of education fighting over whether we should provide Medicare?

"The problem is our lack of ability to organize ourselves to provide basic services to people."

GOSPEL MUSIC at a special spring rally will be sung by members of Joyous Celebration from Seattle. The inter-church concert at Emmanuel Baptist Sunday, May 4 at 8:30 p.m. will be given by the six-member Christian group and sponsored by the Greater Victoria Christian Mission and Emmanuel Baptist. Everyone is invited, and no admission will be charged.

ARMY NAMES CHAIRMAN

Victoria ophthalmologist John T. Cruise has been elected chairman of the Salvation Army's Victoria Advisory Board.

He was elected at a recent annual meeting and succeeds S. G. Mooney who served for more than three years.

New vice-chairman will be local architect John H. Wade.

It was reported at the meeting that Army's 1974 Red Shield campaign, now finished, was over-subscribed. This year's appeal has an objective of $145,000.

Bidding Probe Set

Education Minister Eileen Dailly said Friday she would check into reports of unusual bidding practices taking place regarding the awarding of a contract for work on Capilano College in North Vancouver.

Hugh Curtis (SC—Saanich and the Islands) said opposition leader Bill Bennett received a telegram earlier Friday from a "well-known company" asking him to help prevent the awarding of a $1.8 million contract to Chimo Industries Ltd.

The telegram from R. B. Russell, vice-president and general manager of Fabco Leasing, a division of Neonex Shelter Industries Co. Ltd., said Chimo had not filed the normal $191,000 bid bond.

"Unfortunately, numerous efforts and requests to the contracting authority — Capilano College — the architects, department of education officials and the college of board of trustees has been unsuccessful in preventing this flagrant violation of universally accepted bidding practice not to mention moral and ethical business procedures," the telegram said.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): Lunar cycle is such that you can act in a more creative, independent, manner. Family member becomes ally rather than adversary. Taurus, Scorpio and Libra could figure prominently. Take steps forward—stop being suspicious of one who really does love you.

PISCES (Feb. 19 - March 20): Check special organization, institution. You may be living in a world of illusion. Get green light from authoritative source before making commitment. Accent is on clandestine conference which helps shed light on area obscured by mystery clouds.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Co-operate with Aries. Emphasis is on friendship which could blossom into meaningful relationship. Avoid signing papers which make you responsible for payments which another individual compiles. Be sensible in money area, more so than in recent past.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Those who promise contracts, promotions may not actually be in position to fulfill them. Be self-reliant and realistic. You can deal from position of strength — if you are responsible, willing to take on overtime assignment. Pisces figures prominently.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Lunar aspects promise long-distance communications, a greater understanding of what appears far away and hard to obtain. You gain added recognition by completing important task. Aries, Libra may be involved.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Dig beneath surface indications for valid information. Concern with heart of matters is evident. Take first steps — highlight original cocepts. Be independent and a self-starter. Member of opposite sex pays compliment — and means it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept 22): Go slow. Pace yourself. Listen to one who shares interests and is interested in teaching you. Aquarian figures prominently. Your hunch can help you strike pay dirt. Know it and respond accordingly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Study Virgo message for valid hint. Keep diet, health and work resolutions. Continue with steady pace — avoid extremes in all vital areas. Relative may want to do right thing but lacks equipment. Know it and prepare for adjustment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be aware of details, fine print, what is written between the lines. Take nothing for granted. If you are thorough, you succeed. Another Scorpio, a Leo and a Taurus are in picture. Accent is on romantic intentions, creative efforts.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): See as is, not merely as you wish situations, persons might be. Important now to build on solid base. Obtain valid hint from Scorpio message. Be patient, not lackadaisical. Push through a labyrinth of subtle obstacles. You'll see the light!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Home environment is more important than usual. Know it and win family members as allies. Taurus, Libra could figure in key ways. Someone is preparing a surprise for you. Protect self in emotional clinches.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You receive "hidden opportunity." Means what is proposed may not seem so fine at first glance. Give yourself time to digest complete concept. Become aware of potential. Don't sell yourself short. You should accept added responsibility.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are sensuous, inquisitive, fond of travel, capable of expressing yourself through written word. Gemini, Virgo persons play significant roles in your life. March and December could be your most important months of 1975. The year features key changes, plenty of variety, travel and — if single — opportunity for marriage.

CANTERBURY TALES CHARMING MUSICAL

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Anyone who has knowledge of the Western Canada Theatre Company knows that at the very least it stands for vitality, competence, a young, zestful enthusiasm.

That reputation won't suffer at all by the current tour vehicle, Canterbury Tales.

This very original and charming musical appeared at McPherson Playhouse Friday and will be repeated there tonight at 8.

Directed by London Actress Carol Gillies and produced by Tom Kerr, it is reasonably faithful to the long-running London production especially in its quaint formalization of some scenes.

These formalizations have found their inspiration in one-perspective medieval paintings and they lend a unique atmosphere to the performance.

Canterbury Tales is an hilarious slightly bawdy romp based on four of Geoffrey Chaucer's broadly humorous narratives told by a group of pilgrims at an inn on the journey to St. Thomas Becket's shrine.

Each tale — the miller's, the steward's, the merchant's and the wife of Bath's — is embellished along the way and in between with infectious melodies and rhythms. The stage is flooded with color and the action never stops.

This company provides a genuine ensemble, making it next to impossible and unfair to single out any one performer for praise. Nevertheless, on reflection, two of the actors — Lanni McInnis and Ray Wallis — do emerge as representative of the company at its very best.

Singing, movement, timing, tempo — all are excellent.

In this production the orchestra with talented music director Rick Fox at the electronic keyboard, is on stage.

There are only four pieces including percussion and no doubt the arrangement is necessary for a tour that takes in all manner of unlikely "theatres."

But its presence in the McPherson does limit use of the stage and its electronically boosted decibels at times overpower the production.

Regardless of whether or not you like your music so boosted, good theatre requires that no one element of scenery, costume, music, whatever, should distract from others or cause an imbalance.

The group of musicians plays extremely well but there are moments when the actors appear as a background blur to the music.

In this one area the production needs adjusting. Otherwise it is a genuine delight.

Music Festival Ending Tonight

Last competition in the Victoria Music Festival will be held tonight starting at 8 in Newcombe Auditorium.

The piano championships will see 14 outstanding performers, all winners in one or more classes during the last 10 days, competing against each other in junior, intermediate, senior and open contests.

Winner of the last mentioned will receive the City of Victoria Medallion and a $125 bursary. Other winners will receive $50, $75 and $100 bursaries respectively.

In addition each of the runners-up will receive bursary awards.

A new award by Peter Pollen Ford of $75 is for contemporary music and the adjudicators have requested a play-off for it. The two competitors are Becky Jay and David Bulmer and the decision will be made tonight.

Three pianists will be competing in the Medallion class for the first time. They are Robert Holliston, Jocelyn Abbott and Christopher Donison.

Joanne Dunkin and Maudie Van Klaveren are the senior competitors; Gloria Wong, Patricia Izik and Geoffrey Jay, the intermediate, and Diane Underwood, Ingrid Brandstetter, Theresa Lowe and Melinda Cownden the juniors.

Adjudicators Alexandra Munn and Robin Harrison will be present but adjudications will be short as all competitors have already received complete summaries.

EXORCISM 'VALID'

TORONTO (CP) — Exorcism and healing are valid parts of Christianity, the Archbishop of Canterbury said Friday.

Most Rev. Donald Coggan told a news conference that exorcism should only be performed with medical and psychiatric advice and under tight control by the church.

"This is not a spectacle to be done under the glare of television cameras," he added.

Real Compost Smells Sweet

GARDENING
jack beastall

This column has always advised the use of humus, in the form of composted vegetable and animal wastes, to improve the texture of soil, to hold mosture at root level in our dry summers, and to increase the populations of soil micro-organisms which make plant foods available and absorb gases and liquids poisonous to plants, and to make new soil to replace that which is converted to plant use.

For so doing, we have been accused by some of encouraging home gardeners to provide breeding places for pests and diseases, creating foul odors, attracting rodents that are dangerous to health, and causing domestic pets to become a nuisance.

Talking with opponents to compost making has brought out several facts. Most noteworthy is that the majority have no idea of the difference between a compost heap and a garbage dump; no knowledge of soil, what it is, or how it is made and maintained; nor of soil populations so important to plant growth and indirectly to man's continued existence.

Many people who consider a compost heap untidy and objectionable in a garden do not consider it untidy or objectionable to trundle wheelbarrow loads of garden refuse down the block to a vacant lot.

There is also an angle to the present curtailment in garbage collections. The opponents of compost heaps think nothing of bundling their garbage and taking it to dumps in public parks which adjoin private gardens.

Here it is allowed to putrify, breed flies and pests, attract rodents, scavengers and dogs, scatter litter far and wide on strong winds, and create a stench that is unbearable to residents withing a half mile radius.

Having one of these dumps nearby I can vouch for these statements. Adjoining gardens and rooftops are littered with stale bread, bones and meat scraps dropped by crows and seagulls, while roaming dogs tear open the bags and scatter the contents.

But these things do not matter to fastidious gardeners as long as their gardens are clean and sweet by their standards. One can imagine the furore that would result if the local authorites designated a vacant lot next to their garden as a temporary communal garbage dump.

Most home gardeners are realizing, probably for the first time, the quantity of household wastes of plant or animal origin that can be made into good soil, and have a bigger and better compost heap than ever before. These gardeners are doing a service to their gardens, their plants and their communities.

Going back to the objections to having a compost heap. First; there can be no foul odors from a compost heap; if there are, the heap is a garbage heap and quite unsuitable for making soil. Good compost has a sweet smell similar to the smell of honey. If, through some error, in building, decomposition is arrested, the smell can be likened to a sour vinegar. Neither smell can be termed objectionable.

Secondly, cats will rarely look at a compost heap, except to sit on top and enjoy the warmth of a working heap on a cool evening. They will dig a hole in an old heap if no better soil is nearby; instinct tells them the preponderance of beneficial bacteria will quickly decompose the wastes and prevent the spread of disease to other felines. This is the reason cats gravitate to gardens with good soil.

Dogs and rodents are attracted to food, such as stale bread, cooked foods, meat scraps, fats, oils or grease. These are never put into a compost heap because they cannot be decomposed by soil organisms. Any heap containing them is just a garbage pile.

I recall an instance which, I think, illustrates my contention the many objections are merely excuses. The problems in the garden concerned were obviously the result of a worn out soil. A compost heap was suggested to utilize garden refuse now being trucked away at the gardener's expense.

The owner explained his sincere belief in compost, but stressed that the neighbors would not tolerate compost heaps in gardens.

Three weeks later I was called to the garden next door, and spotted a magnificent compost heap right against the fence of the man whose "neighbors would not tolerate compost heaps in gardens."

This is ample proof that a properly made compost heap can exist without annoyance to anyone, and possibly without the knowledge of those living the other side of the fence, but in this instance I suspect the neighbors were being used as an excuse.

Soil suitable for growing the higher forms of plants consists of sand or clay mixed with organic matter. The organic matter is broken down into chemicals by soil micro-organisms and used by plants to make growth. The organic matter decreases and the sand or clay remains fairly constant.

As the humus content decreases the plants become increasingly weakened through lack of adequate nourishment and progressively prone to both pests and diseases. To maintain healthy growth the humus content must be constantly replenished.

Nature spreads humus on the surface of the soil where it takes years to decompose in the presence of air, and only those plants which can find sufficient nutriment will flourish in a given area. In a garden where plants from all over the world are expected to flourish side by side, this method of adding compost is too slow.

The fastidious gardener who considers neatness the prime object of gardening, who abhors soil protected by native plants (disparagingly called weeds), who has all plant and animal wastes removed from the property and strongly opposes composting, is the gardener constantly needing help with his problems.

If there were laws compelling gardeners to show a significant improvement in their soil every year of tenancy there would be compost heaps in every garden, less need for sprays and herbicides which damage the environment, more beneficial insects and birds which are natural pest controls, and better food and ornamental plants for the gardener's body and soul.

WORK FOR WEEK

A lot of catch-up jobs to do this week: plant gladiolus corms, in groups, not rows; other summer flowering corms, bulbs apd tubers should also be put in; shear winter heathers of their flower stalks if not already done.

Set out the hardiest annuals after being gradually acclimatized. These include snapdragons, carnations, pansies, phlox.

On broad beans sown last fall, pinch out the growth tips all over each plant after first pods are set, to lessen the attraction to black aphis. Plants from seed sown this spring will need this attention as they reach the same stage.

If tomato plants available, set each into a six-inch pot of good soil; grown outdoors daytime, bring in at night for next two to three weeks until night temperatures are warmer. Try for an inside temperature between 10 and 12 deg. Celsius at night.

Troops Want Out

Manchester Guardian

LUANDA, Angola — The prospect of civil war in Angola and the the political uncertainty in Portugal have created a strong impetus among the remaining Portuguese troops in this west African territory for their accelerated withdrawal.

Lisbon has 30,000 soldiers left in Angola and further reductions in May will bring the troops level down to 24,000 under the terms of the Algarve agreement, which brought the three nationalist movements into a transitional government on Jan. 31. This force is to be phased out by next February.

However, the apparently unanimous feeling among the military is that they cannot fairly be expected to stay on after independence on Nov. 11. Few of the Portuguese soldiers here took part in the 13-year-long war against the guerrillas. They have no inclination for the role of referee in the three-way conflict that is developing between the competing nationalist movements.

The sagging morale among the metropolitan troops is an important factor at a time when many senior nationalist figures are looking to Lisbon for a security umbrella during the risky early period of independence.

But the fact is that the Portuguese officers are having a hard time interpreting their role as peacemakers and rationalizing it to an increasingly disgruntled soldiery. As one Portuguese officer explained: "We all know that a nationalist fight is inevitable after independence. The movements are pouring arms into this place. No one is doing anything about it. The idea that we should sit around as targets after November is not acceptable. They (the nationalists) wanted this country and they have got it. They will have to work out their own differences."

For the time being Portuguese patrols, mixed with newly arrived troops from the liberation movements, are responsible for security in the capital of Luanda and in major population centres throughout the country.

The patrols concentrate on the teeming slums that lie in an arc landward of the city. The capital has close to 1 million population and almost 350,000 of them, all Africans, live in the fetid shanty towns around the poor white subsurbs that ring the rich city centre. The bulk of the African population in the townships support the MPLA (Poppular Movement for the Liberation of Angola) and its leader Agostinho Neto who was born 40 miles away in the town of Catete. With the arrival in force of the FNLA (National Front for the Liberation of Angola) in the capital in February tension began to crackle across the musseuques or townships.

FISH EATS TOMATOES

TORONTO (CP) — The Metropolitan Toronto Zoo has acquired a rare fish that eats anything, although its favorite dish is tomatoes.

Bill Roman, who donated the 13-pound fish to the zoo, said that while he and his family had the Osphronemus goramy, a species from the Indo-Malaysian peninsula, it grew out of a 30-gallon tank, and finally the last container had to hold 300 gallons.

Mr. Roman was given the fish by a friend who was working on research in the biology department at University of Toronto.

When the species of the fish was established, Mr. Roman set out to find out as much as he could about the addition to his fish collection.

"They have an auxiliary internal breathing system, which allows them to breathe above the surface of the water, and to survive through a dry season in the minimum of water," he said.

This is why they can live in polluted water and still remain edible.

"The species has been of considerable interest to scientists in the Soviet Union and the United States who see them as a valuable food supply in an increasingly polluted world."

Warehouse School That Works Seeking New Home

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

A small school which has been operating quietly from an unglamorous Alpha Street warehouse for nearly three years is looking for new quarters.

The Warehouse School must move by the end of May, because the St. Vincent de Paul Society has sold the warehouse at 508 Alpha and the new owner plans to turn it into offices.

The Warehouse School was started in July, 1972 by two sisters of St. Ann, Sister Charlotte Dauk and Sister Jacqueline Aubuchon as an alternative to public schools.

It serves people, both teen-agers and adults, who can't fit into the regular school system.

"Anybody who could make it anywhere else we don't take," said Dauk, who is now school director.

The school, which had 35 students its first year, this year had 126 attending at various times.

Enrolment is about 50, two-thirds of them teenagers.

Dauk said the school was founded to help adults, specifically ex-convicts, but the need for alternative education for teen-agers has always been greater.

Most teen-agers at the school were misfits in public school who were referred to Dauk by social workers, probation officers or concerned parents, she said.

"A lot of them are so turned off school that to go back would put them into hell," she said.

Education at the warehouse is much less structured than public schools, she said, so kids feel less pressure. This school they enjoy.

The school is open 3½ days a week, until Thursday noon, which is as long as the students want to attend each week.

Most of the teen-agers are studying to get their Grade 10 so they can get a job, Dauk said, although a few are going after their Grade 11 or 12.

Classes cover general upgrading subjects like English, social studies, math and general science.

There are no science labs or the range of electives that public schools offer, but Warehouse School students aren't looking for that, she said.

"We are making the failures succeed," she said.

The teen-agers are divided into three seminar groups, and each group meets daily from 11 a.m. till noon.

"The purpose is to help the kids relate to a smaller group, to have a chance to reflect on and discuss life situations," she said.

The seminar groups also take trips together — to the museum, to Royal Roads, to a bottling factory, and so on.

Each Tuesday afternoon is reserved for special activities.

Last fall the students usually spent this time making pottery, batik and carvings in one of the warehouse rooms.

These days the afternoon is usually spent listening to a guest speaker, such as the young lawyer who came this week to talk about courts and judges and probation officers.

Other speakers have included consumer affairs experts, judges and even palm readers.

Adults at the school are given more freedom as to when they attend and at what they work, and Dauk said many adults have very specific goals in mind.

Oldest student is a 53-year-old man doing math upgrading to prepare himself for running his own business.

Another man is learning how to read.

The adult group has its own seminar once a week.

Dauk has a staff of six full-time and two part-time teachers, all paid slightly more than the minimum wage.

The school is founded by the human resource department until the end of this school year, then must apply again for funding.

The atmosphere in the school is relaxed.

The students work at old tables or second-hand desks in the main room. In one corner there's a table with a coffee urn. A collection of books on some shelves are the beginning of a library.

An adjoining room has a couple of dilapidated couches and a stack of National Geographic magazines which comprise the reference library. In another part of this room is a ping pong table someone has donated, and in another corner the crafts work area.

Another small room is used to show films, with a sheet tacked on the wall for a screen.

GM PROFITS HIT NEW LOW

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors earned $59 million in the first three months of 1975 — off 51 per cent from last year, the lowest in 29 years and the only black ink expected from the depressed auto industry for the January-March quarter.

The top executives of GM said there were strong signs of steady improvement in the U.S. economy that point to an upturn in auto sales, now at the lowest level in 14 years.

Earnings per share amounted to 20 cents compared with 41 cents a share last year. It was the sixth straight quarter that GM profits failed to match a year-ago performance.

GUILTY VERDICT IN BANK THEFT

In a seven-page written judgment Victoria Provincial Court District Judge William Ostler on Friday found Kenneth George Katrensky, 27, guilty of robbing a city bank of $1,484 March 12.

The legal question that led to the written judgment was whether Katrensky had committed a robbery as defined by the criminal code.

The code specifies force of threats of violence must be made to warrant the charge.

Defence lawyer Ted Pollard had argued there had been no threat of violence and therefore Katrensky was only guilty of theft.

Ostler noted there was no dispute as to the facts. Katrensky had gone to the Bank of Nova Scotia, Douglas and Courtney, and presented a bag to teller Donna Lee Budd on which was written "Empty Your Till." Then he stood silent and grinning as Miss Budd filled the bag with money. After she had handed him back the bag he sauntered out of the bank and walked casually down the street, even stopping at a crosswalk waiting for the light to change.

He was arrested two blocks away and the bag and money recovered.

Miss Budd had testified that despite Katrensky's mannerisms she had not considered his actions a joke.

Ostler concluded the teller had no option but to hand over the money because of the "menaces implicit in the totality of the conduct of the accused."

He said, "Surely, in common sense, in these circumstances the complement of the phrase 'Empty Your Till' is 'Or Else'."

He remanded Katrensky to May 21 for a presentence report and sentencing.

Building Jumps

Esquimalt building permits since Jan. 1 are more than double what they were a year ago, despite three months of municipal lockout and slowdown of civic services and inspections.

Engineer Mac Campbell said the $4.28 million for January-April was "better than ever," and compared with $2.13 million last year, $1.88 million in 1973, $2.12 million in 1972, $1.1 million in 1971 and $826,000 in 1970.

The engineer said supervisory staff had tried to keep on top of demands for new construction permits and building inspections, and guessed that Esquimalt had probably fared better than the other municipalities for construction progress during the area-wide lockout.

Belligerent Babies In Cyclone's Wake

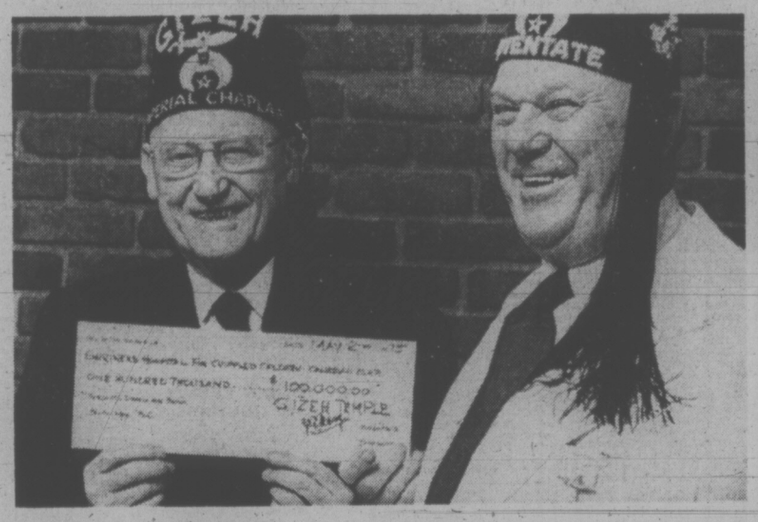
DARWIN (Reuter) — Previously mild-mannered children have suffered fits and nightmares, bitten each other and destroyed toys and bedclothes as an aftermath of the cyclone which flattened this tropical Australian city on Christmas Day, a doctor said Friday.

Ellen Stack, who has been working on people's emotional and physical problems since cyclone Tracy killed 50 persons, told reporters that the psychological effect on children under eight is "horrifying."

More than four months after the disaster, "mild-tempered children are now fiercely aggressive, and it's not rare for mothers to find sheets torn to shreds and toys wrecked," Dr. Stack said.

"This age group is having screaming fits and terrifying nightmares. In some of the child-minding centres set up since the cyclone, the children have gone wild, biting each other. The marks are deep and sizeable.

"Children who were toilet trained before, are now avid bedwetters."



SHRINERS HOSPITALS for crippled children received a $100,000 boost Friday. The cheque, presented to Imperial Chaplain Rev. Reg Redman by Illustrious Potentate Capt. Harry J. C. Terry, will be used to run the 22 Shrine hospitals in North America, 20 in the United States and two in Canada. Shriners are winding up their three-day convention in Victoria today with a musical show in Memorial Arena from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. and the Potentate's Ball in the Hillside Mall at 9 p.m. (John McKay photo)

GOV'T TO PROVIDE CANCER EQUIPMENT

Hospitals at Nanaimo and Comox will receive breast cancer detection equipment from the provincial government.

The announcement was made by Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich, MLA for Nanaimo, who said addition of the mammography x-ray equipment is part of a $1.4 million provincial program to tackle the breast cancer problem in a bold way.

The mortality rate from breast cancer has not changed in 35 years, Stupich pointed out, all told, 26 hospitals throughout the province are getting such equipment.

Health Minister Dennis Cocke said the detection program should help but he urged all women to learn and practice self-examination as it was still the best method of detection.

Blaikie — Bryan

Gilmore Park United Church in Richmond was the setting for a beautiful double-ring ceremony on March 29, when Kim, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Bryan of Richmond became the bride of Kim Robert Blaikie, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Blaikie of Victoria. Reverend W. Briggs officiated. During the signing of the register Sister Marie Bouchard sang "Wedding Song" and "Morning Has Broken."

Entering the church on the arm of her father, the bride looked lovely in an entrain gown of chiffon crepe, featuring natural waistline and short sleeves. Scallops of matching material enhanced the sleeves, neckline and hem. Lace applique adorned the bodice and around the edge of the skirt. A blue satin ribbon encircled her waist, and dainty matching bows her hemline. Knife-pleated chiffon ruffle flowed below the skirt. Her four-tiered chapel veil of illusion net was held with a cap of matching lace. She carried a colonial bouquet of white roses, daisies, lily of the valley and blue forget-me-nots. Maid of honor, Miss Kelly Bryan, sister of the bride, wore a gown of yellow floral crepe. Bridesmaids, Mrs. Janice McGowan, Miss Louise Trusler of Richmond, and Mrs. Marlyne Kowatski of 100 Mile House wore identical gowns in blue. They carried colonial bouquets of yellow and blue daisies. Frank Morris was best man, and Glen Lorimer and Chuck Blaikie, brother of the groom, all from Victoria, and Garry Peakman, of Delta, ushered the guests.

The reception was held at Minoru Pavilion. The bride's table was centred by a three-tiered wedding cake decorated by the groom's mother, Mr. Lyle Colling of Pender Harbor proposed the toast to the bride. A telegram from England was read.

Out-of-town guests were from Victoria, 100 Mile House, Kelowna, and Pender Harbor.

Following a honeymoon to Harrison Hot Springs the young couple are living in Victoria.

Campbell — Jenner

Reverend Albert King officiated at a double-ring ceremony in the Metropolitan United Church on March 1, 1975, at 6:00 p.m. when Debra Lynne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Barry Jenner, exchanged wedding vows with Roger Alexander, son of Mrs. Lloyd Stevens, Victoria, and Mr. Warren Campbell, Comox.

Given in marriage by her father the bride chose an elegant Elizabethan-styled wedding gown of peau d'ange over taffeta. The fitted bodice with a high necked yoke of Guipure lace was emproidered with pearls as were the cuffs of the long sleeves and the full train. A high pearl cap held her silk illusion veil and she carried a bouquet of pink roses, white carnations and pink heather. The matron of honor, Mrs. Kathi Webb, and bridesmaids, Miss Sandra Jenner and Miss Christine Jenner, wore identical gowns of blue peau de soie and they carried bouquets of pink carnations and white mums. The ring bearer, Master Gary Pemberton, cousin of the bride, carried the wedding bands on a white silk pillow. Mr. Murray Campbelli, brother of the groom, attended as best man, and the ushers were Messrs. Brian Pavis and Robert Carpentelle.

A reception was held at the Faculty Club. Mr. Doug Robinson gave a toast to the bride and the beautiful three-tiered white and pink wedding cake was made and decorated by the bride's uncle, Mr. Edgar Gibbons.

Following a honeymoon in California and Mexico the newly married couple took up residence in their new home.

Garman — Routley

The marriage of Mary Robin Routley, younger daughter of Mrs. Clifford Routley and the late Clifford Routley, to Paul Frederick Garman, son of Mr. and Mrs. David S. 9 IN MEMORIAM

FENN — In loving memory of Guy O. Fenn, who passed away May 4th, 1972.
God saw he was getting weary,
He did what he thought best,
And said "Come and rest,"
With goodbyes left unspoken,
He silently slipped away,
And entered his eternal rest, three years ago today.
—Sadly missed by his wife Winnie and all the family.

GEORGE—In loving memory of our dear Mother and Grand mother Sarah George who passed away May 3, 1972.
Peacefully sleeping, resting at last.
The world's weary trouble and trials are past.
In silence she suffered, in patience she bore,
Till God called her home to suffer no more.
—From daughters Jean, Karen and their families.

GEORGE—In loving memory of our dear wife Sarah George who passed away May 3, 1972.
God knows how much I miss her,
Never shall her memory fade;
Loving thoughts shall ever wander
To the spot where she is laid.
—From her husband Ed George.

McMILLAN—In loving memory of our beloved Mother and Nana, Margaret McMillan, who passed away May 3rd, 1974.
"Treasured memories will always keep her near".
—Shirley and Howard Wakelin and family, Isabelle and Bill Mundie and family.

ORCHIN—In loving memory of my very dear mother and grandmother Kathleen, who passed away May 3, 1966.
And while she lies in peaceful sleep
Her memory we shall always keep.
—Always remembered by Leslie, Bob and family.

ORCHIN—In loving memory of my wife Kathleen, who passed away on May 3, 1966. —Ever remembered by her husband Ernest.

RANKIN—In loving memory of Ethel J. M. Rankin, who passed away to higher service May 4, 1974.
One year among the angels, beloved thou hast been,
One year has heaven's white portal shut back the sound of sin;
And yet no voice, no whisper, comes floating down from thee,
To tell us what lad wonder a year of heaven may be.
—Ever remembered by Ian, Judy of heaven may be.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
—WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS.

REMARKABLE MIND LEADS TO JAIL

EDMONTON — A man, described by his lawyer as having a "remarkable mind" but being unable to tell the truth, will spend the next six years in prison.

The Alberta supreme court appellate division Friday dismissed appeals by 33-year-old Ralph Kahan against sentences imposed on him on three charges of fraud, one charge of attempted fraud and two counts of possessing stolen cars.

The court was told that Kahan spent nine months in Canada and in that time, stole a Mercedes-Benz and a Lincoln Continental, defrauded people and banks of about $389,000 and tried to defraud an insurance agency of another $21,000.

Lawyer Bruce Gunn asked the court to be merciful to his client, saying Kahan had a remarkable mind and had been brought up in Fiji where he had no opportunity to use his intellect.

He emphasized throughout his argument that none of the information he gave the court came from Kahan.

"I don't think my client can tell the truth for more than 10 minutes straight or on two factors in a row," Gunn told the court, adding that Kahan had continued to lie to him even up to two hours before the court session.

Fewer Movies on the Tube in Fall

LOS ANGELES — The new television season next fall will bring an increase in situation comedies, a reduction in movies and the usual abundance of police and private detectives.

The fall schedule was completed Friday as ABC unveiled its lineup and announced it has cancelled seven series: Kung Fu, Caribe, The Odd Couple, Hot l Baltimore, Karen, Get Christie Love and Kolchak.

That brought to 18 the number of shows now on the three networks that won't be back.

ABC said it is adding three new half-hour comedies to its schedule—When Things Were Rotten, a Mel Brooks concoction based on the Robin Hood legend; Welcome Back, Kotter, about a teacher in a Brooklyn ghetto school; and On the Rocks, which takes place in a minimum-security prison.

In all, there will be 22 situation comedies on the air next fall—seven more than debuted last September.

What made room for the new ones in some cases was the reduction by all three networks of many of their movie nights.

There will be 18 shows dealing with cops and private eyes in the fall, including such new entries as Matt Helm and Starsky and Hutch from ABC, The Metro Man from NBC and Bronk from CBS.

As for the old TV staple of defence attorneys, there'll be two of them—Petrocelli, back for a second season on NBC, and the new Kate McShane on CBS.

Friday nights at 8 p.m. EDT, NBC's entrenched Sanford and Son will be challenged by CBS's Big Eddie, a new comedy with Sheldon Leonard. At 8:30 p.m., the popular Chico and the Man of NBC goes up against the equally popular M.A.S.H. of CBS.

Then at 9 p.m. it will be CBS's Hawaii Five-O against NBC's The Rockford Files, and at 10 p.m. CBS's Barnaby Jones is pitted against NBC's Police Woman.

ABC is counter-programming its two rivals on Fridays with a new hour-long variety show starring Howard Cosell at 8 p.m. and movies beginning at 9 p.m.

Solzhenitsyn Enters Canada For an Easter Retreat

MONTREAL — Alexander Solzhenitsyn, the exiled Russian author who is making a private visit to Canada, wishes to remain in seclusion over the Russian Orthodox Easter, churchmen reported Friday.

Archbishop Silvester, head of the church's Canadian diocese, and Rev. John Tkachuk, dean of Montreal's Russian Orthodox cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul, confirmed the presence of the famed dissident novelist, 1973 winner of the Nobel prize.

Solzhenitsyn, who took up residence in Switzerland after being expelled from the Soviet Union, arrived in Montreal last Saturday on a Swissair flight from Zurich, a federal immigration spokesman reported, travelling on a visitor's visa which allows him to stay six months and go anywhere in Canada.

KINGSTON, Jamaica — The man who will replace Canada's Arnold Smith as secretary-general of the Commonwealth is Shridath Surendranath Ramphal, 47, foreign minister of Guyana. Ramphal's election was announced Friday by Michael Manley, prime minister of Jamaica, which is hosting the Commonwealth leaders conference. Ramphal will take over from Smith next month.

WASHINGTON — The United States Appeal court has tossed out a lower court decision ordering Allegheny Airline to pay consumer advocate Ralph Nader and the Connecticut Citizen Action Group $50,000 for bumping Nader off an overbooked flight. In a ruling Friday, the court ordered the case returned to the U.S. district court to determine whether Allegheny believed its actions had the approval of the Civil Aeronautics Board.

NEWARK, N.J. — A teenage boy has been arrested for allegedly attempting to extort $30,000 from singer Helen Reddy. An FBI spokesman said that agents arrested Gerald Hall, 17, at a Western Union office as he was attempting to collect the money. The spokesman said Hall, demanding $30,000, threatened the singer's life in a series of telephone calls to Jeff Wald, Miss Reddy's husband, in New York on Thursday and Friday.

MONTREAL — Pat Burns, a former open-line broadcaster on a Montreal radio station, and his former employer, Maisonneuve Broadcasting Corp., were assessed $14,285 Friday for libelling a station advertiser in 1966. Justice Alphonse Barbeau said in Superior court there was no doubt that Burns, now living in Vancouver and Maisonneuve Broadcasting were responsible for damages caused to Belair Carpet Corp.

WOODSTOCK, Ont. — The art world is in absolute chaos today, A. J. Casson, the last surviving member of the Group of Seven artists, said Friday. The chaos is the result of the proliferation of art galleries and the tendency of some people to look on art as an investment opportunity, he added.

IRISH DISASTER?

BELFAST (UPI) — A leading Roman Catholic politician warned today of "complete disaster" in Northern Ireland if Protestants use their landslide victory in Thursday's constitutional convention elections to exclude Catholics from power in the province.

"Any attempt to subjugate the minority or keep them out of government now will mean complete disaster," Gerry Fitt, head of the moderate Social Democratic and Labor Party, said.

OTTAWA LEGISLATION SET

Death Penalty to End

By ANDRE OUIMET
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The federal government intends to abolish the death penalty once and for all, according to sources in the Liberal caucus.

Legislation is to be introduced "shortly" by Solicitor General Warren Allmand to end the awkward situation of having the federal cabinet commute death sentences for murderers of policemen and jail guards on duty in apparent defiance of the will of Parliament.

Eight men are currently under the shadow of the gallows, but the decision taken in caucus this week was precipitated by the impending commutation of Rene Vaillancourt, who is to hang May 13 for shooting a police constable in Toronto in 1973 after a holdup.

All death sentences have been commuted by cabinet for the last 13 years, when two men were hanged back-to-back in Toronto's Don Jail.

The Liberal caucus decided that this time, the death penalty legislation would be presented by the party rather than leaving it to individual members, as was done in 1973, when a five-year experimental and partial ban on hanging came up for renewal.

Attempts by Allmand to get a complete ban at the time were thwarted.

His newest proposal is expected to be similar to an amendment introduced at the time by Marcel Prud'homme (L—St. Denis) and James Flemming (L—York West).

That defeated proposal would have banned all hangings, but extended the mandatory sentences of murderers considerably — up to 20 years without parole for a police or jail guard killer.

Liberal caucus members felt the legislation would have no problem getting approved now that they sit in a majority position, and enough Conservative and New Democrat members shared their view to out-vote any Liberals who decided to bolt ranks because of fear of voter reaction.

A recent Gallup Poll showed that 69 per cent of Canadians surveyed favored a complete return to the death penalty — not only for murdering prison guards and policemen but also "any innocent person."

And earlier this week, John Reynolds (PC—Burnaby-Richmond-Delta) tabled a petition signed by 200,000 individuals who want a return to the gallows.

Prime Minister Trudeau's return from his trip to the Caribbean for the Commonwealth Conference on May 7 was awaited before an announcement of Vaillancourt's commutation was to be made, and legislation asking for an end to the death penalty would be introduced shortly afterwards, caucus sources said.

Last Men Back Midweek

Esquimalt and Saanich municipal workers are expected to be back on the job by the middle of next week, the last of the more than 1,700 CUPE workers in the Greater Victoria area to return to work following the three-month civic dispute.

The combined local of Saanich and Sidney Canadian Union of Public Employees members and the Esquimalt CUPE local both rejected the proposed settlement offered by municipal employers, but will carry on further bargaining sessions while they are back at work. The employees will return to work under previous contract pay rates.

Sidney council voted Friday to lift the lockout that has been in effect for three months and Saanich is expected to do the same at its meeting early next week.

Esquimalt CUPE members had expected to be on the picket line for some time yet, but Mayor Art Young said today he will recommend to council Monday that the lockout be lifted.

The vote is expected to pass easily and Young predicted the employees would be back at work Wednesday morning.

A surprised Larry Flannagan, president of the Esquimalt CUPE local's 85 members, said today the workers will go back if the lockout is lifted.

"I'm elated about this. I feel it's a victory in our favor," he said.

The mayor's recommendation to lift the lockout came as a surprise to the Esquimalt employees. The local had just

Terrorist Bombers Hit Nuclear Plant

STRASBOURG, France (AP) — Two bombs exploded 14 minutes apart on a construction site at the Fessenheim nuclear reactor today and French officials said the attack was apparently the work of a revolutionary group.

Officials said the explosions and a subsequent fire were in a "non-operative area" in the nuclear-reactor plant.

"Responsibility for the attack is being claimed by a revolutionary group that we have never heard of before," the officials said. "There were no injuries."

An anonymous telephone call to a newspaper from a man describing himself as a member of the "Meinhof-Puig Antich" group said that three explosive devices had been planted on the grounds.

The caller said that he had given a warning to officials at the reactor that the bombs would go off three-quarters of an hour before they were set to detonate.

Fessenheim is between Colmar and Mulhouse on the Rhine River which separates France and Germany.

There was no immediate identification of the "Meinhof-Puig Antich" group in France. Ulrike Meinhof is a West German anarchist serving an eight-year prison sentence for helping another anarchist escape custody. She is accused of helping run the Baader-Meinhof gang, blamed for a series of bombings and killings in West Germany.

School Lunch Terror

TORONTO (CP) — About 90 pupils and teachers, held hostage at gunpoint during lunch hour at an east-end school, were released unharmed Friday when a policeman persuaded a 14-year-old boy to surrender.

Staff-Sgt. Pat Keere said Friday that Constable Donald Buchanan talked to the suspect through the cafeteria door and convinced him to give up the .22-calibre rifle and several rounds of ammunition.

Before the boy surrendered, police said, one of the pupils leaped out of a second-storey window but was not injured.

Police said the boy walked into the cafeteria and ordered everyone to lie on the floor. Everyone complied after the suspect fired one shot into a wall.

Police were alerted by a pedestrian who saw the boy walking into the school armed with the gun. After an investigation, police said, they charged the boy with breaking and entering and theft of a gun.

He is also charged with possession of a weapon dangerous to the public peace.

The boy was released in custody of his parents and will likely appear Monday in juvenile court, police said.

The students were in Grades 5 to 8 and three teachers were involved.

One pupil, a girl, said "it was scary."

3 Air Canada Cheques Signed Without Looking

By ROB BULL
Times Quebec Bureau

MONTREAL — Yves Menard, Air Canada's former vice-president of marketing, told a federal inquiry Friday that he signed cheques on behalf of the company totalling $100,000 without reading the papers which accompanied them explaining why the payment was made.

The documents, which he signed, were prepared by two of his subordinates. Menard said he also failed to notice that the cheques were made out to an individual instead of a company.

Menard said he did not read the papers, which he placed in his personal files, until last month when he watched television news reports of a question about the payment in the House of Commons. He told reporters later he would not have signed if he had read the papers.

He also said the reason stated by the documents for the payment of a single $40,000 and two $30,000 cheques to Montreal travel agent R. Y. McGregor was not in fact why the money was paid.

The investigation by Mr. Justice Willard Zebedee Estey of the Ontario Supreme Court into the financial administration of the airline reached the end of its first week of hearings.

Testimony to date has offered little understanding of the choice of mechanism for the payment.

Menard said he signed the cheques and the letters prepared by his aides in order to secure on behalf of the airline an option to buy a share of McGregor's travel agency.

This, he explained, would be a step towards the airline's eventual participation in a nation-wide travel service.

The letters which accompanied the cheques and the forms authorizing payment indicated that the money was paid to McGregor for consultant services to influence governments in Latin America, the Middle East and in Canada.

At the time of the payment in November 1974, shortly before McGregor began lengthy medical treatment for a pulmonary embolism., Air Canada was aware that the federal government was contemplating negotiations with Venezuela and Lebanon for eventual Air Canada service.

At the same time, both Ontario and Quebec were drafting laws to regulate the travel industry.

But the payment to McGregor was part of a long-term Air Canada corporate strategy which would eventually enable the airline to provide customers with what Menard referred to several times as the "total travel experience."

This would eventually involve the company in such allied activities as hotels and tour promotion.

Menard said that once he and McGregor agreed on the arrangement in September 1974, he discussed the matter in detail with nobody either inside or outside the company, including Air Canada's chairman and managing director Yves Pratte who had been informed of Menard's general plans.

Hempsall Severance $20,773

A civil servant who resigned after three years service with the B.C. government has been awarded a $20,773 severance payment.

The cabinet approved the payment this week to Leslie Hempsall, former associate deputy of economic development who resigned in February.

"I know it's unusual," Economic Development Minister Gary Lauk said Friday when asked about the cabinet decision.

"But it was a decision of mine that he provided good service to us. I think there's nothing wrong with that," he said.

The payment is equal to six months salary, said Lauk, and will give Hempsall some time to set up his own consulting practice.

"I don't know if it is a precedent but I thought it would be reasonable in this case," Lauk said.

Both Hempsall and Lauk have said his departure is a resignation but opposition members have hinted in the house that the deputy was fired.

Hempsall, 54, was appointed deputy minister of the department in Jan., 1972, under the Social Credit government but was shifted to associate deputy in 1974.

At the time he left the government, Hempsall said:

"I was in industry before and now I've had three and a half years in government, so now I have enough experience on both sides to go it on my own. I got what I wanted out of it."

ROCKET ATTACK

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Arab guerrillas fired two Soviet-made rockets aimed at the Knesset (parliament) and other government buildings in Jerusalem today. But they missed their targets, causing only light damage and no casualties, Israeli police said.

In Beirut, the Palestinian guerrilla leadership said the rockets scored "direct hits" on the buildings and inflicted heavy material and human losses. It said the attack was carried out by a special guerrilla force operating inside Israeli-occupied territories.

A general mobilization was called when reports of the attack first reached police. Israeli soldiers joined in the operation and an army helicopter hovered over the site of one blast.

Indians 'Not Forced' to Take Money

PROTEST OVER

WAGNER, S.D. (UPI—Seven Indians who took over a packing plant, held two hostages for several hours and kept more than 100 law officers away with sporadic gunfire, surrendered Friday night following a barrage of teargas by state troopers. There was only one minor injury during the incident, police said.

No one is going to force money down Indians' throats, federal Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan said in Victoria Friday.

He made the comment in the face of announced policy of B.C. native Indians to refuse federal funds including welfare cheques and after day-long meetings with Human Resources Minister Norm Levi.

Mostly, the ministers were non-committal after their talks although both agreed "the ball was in their court" after an escalation of demonstrations by the Indians to protest lack of government action.

Both Buchanan and Levi declined to specify what form further government action would take.

Talks had ranged over the issues of cut-off lands and Indian land claims in B.C., Buchanan said.

Discussion was "blunt," and federal and provincial representatives got an eyeball-to-eyeball view, he added.

Buchanan said the federal government has traditionally accepted the responsibility to deal with legitimate claims of the Indian people — "it's not new ground being broken by me."

Although no schedule of meetings has been agreed on by the ministers it was accepted that further discussion would take place.

In a related development Atlin MLA Frank Calder has joined the battle for an Indian land claims settlement.

In a letter to Premier Barrett this week, Calder said he wished "to reiterate my requests for the provincial government to consider the advisability of participating with the federal government and native Indians of B.C. in negotiations" for land claims.

Meanwhile, Indians continue occupations of district Indian Affairs offices that began Thursday in Vernon and Kamloops.

Indians who occupied the department's office in Williams Lake ended their one-day sit-in Thursday without incident.

Members of the Skuart-Trembleur Indian band at the Tachie Reserve 130 miles northwest of Prince George, also continued their blockade of the B.C. Railway's Dease Lake extension.

City Elderly—Prayed For, or Preyed On?

By HOI-YIN DER
Times Staff

Elderly Victoria residents appear to be the target of appeals for funds from possibly dubious religious organizations, according to an investigation by the Victoria Times.

The appeals are from groups not registered in British Columbia. Some of them are in the United States but are using Canadian post office boxes. They appear vague as to the use to which donations will be put.

According to John Hanrahan, president of the Victoria Rest Homes Association, it's not hard for appeal operators to get the names and addresses of elderly prospective donors.

"For example, many elderly spinsters will insist on having Miss placed before their names in telephone directories and on their door buzzers."

But he claimed he had never heard of this type of solicitation taking place in rest homes because the residents are well protected.

Other rest home administrators agree that their residents "just don't receive this type of mail."

But when asked how they would know from whom residents receive letters, the general reply they gave was that they "just know."

However, several letters of solicitation have been obtained from residents of rest homes, and contrary to the view taken by rest home administrators, some patients and nurses have said solicitation of funds by religious organizations is common.

One nurse, who prefers to remain anonymous, said many of the elderly cannot afford to contribute to these appeals but do so anyway.

"The main reason is that they are afraid to be left out of the glory of God," she said.

A great deal of this type of appeal for funds is also aimed at older people living on their own.

Although none of the men interviewed at the Senior Citizens' Activity Centre on Centennial Square said they receive mail from religious organizers, many of the elderly women said they often get letters requesting donations and that they do contribute "a dollar or two" when able.

Letters received from C. W. Burpo of the Bible Institute of the Air in Arizona and from Don Gessett of Bold Bible Missions in Surrey illustrate the appeals.

Burpo begins his letter by telling his "dear Canadian friends" the nation is in "deep recession." He says that although this is "manifested" in his mail, he does not want to push any of his "precious radio family" to support him.

Yet Burpo concludes the letter by telling the reader the institute is barely scraping by financially.

"This is the truth and I know that you believe me when I tell you. In addition to radio expense, we have the expense of books, records, tapes, postage, secretarial help, etc."

"This is all! I just wanted you to know how we are getting along and again, I wanted you to know that God and I both love you."

Gossett writes of a woman (whose name is never disclosed) who "had never been able to accept the Blood of Jesus" and was dying of cancer.

But when he "shared the message of the precious blood," she grasped the truth and was made "every whit whole", a fact which, says Gossett, was confirmed by the Cancer Clinic (which he doesn't identify).

Gossett then rhetorically asks whether the recipient of this letter can be "healed by the bleeding stripes of Jesus."

"Oh yes indeed," Gossett says, "By His stripes, you are healed! Confess it and possess it."

Enclosed with the letter is a blank cheque made payable to the Don Gossett Crusade at a Surrey post office box number.

The woman who received this letter is a patient in a local rest home. She is lame, but sent a donation to Gossett and believes that through his prayers she will walk again.

The Times has been unable to contact Gossett or the Bold Bible Mission. Neither Gossett nor the mission has a listing in the telephone directory and the mission is not registered with the registrar of companies.

"While most charitable organizations do register with us, it is not compulsory that they do so," said registrar of companies M. A. Jorre de St. Jorre.

"On the surface it looks like a real con game," said Bill Tindall, executive vice president of the Better Business Bureau, who has been investigating Gossett and the mission.

"If funds were put to legitimate use, there should be no hesitation in making known the proper place of business . . . using only a post office box number, it would appear there was something to conceal," he said.

Tindall said it is also unusual for charitable organizations not register with the registrar of comapnies, which would allow donors to claim exemptions on their income tax returns.

"But there's not much we can do at this moment other than to warn people to not get involved," he said.

Inspector William Kay of the post office security investigations division in Vancouver said there is no specific legislation that would prohibit solicitation by mail.

"There is nothing the post office can do because we have no right to intrude into somebody else's mail," he said.

But even if the Bible mission is a legitimate society, little can be done to stop it from asking for donations.

Corporal Steve Holotuck of the RCMP commercial fraud squad said as long as there is no fraud involved, the fraud squad is unable to act.

Director of trade practices, Michael Hanson, said he doesn't know of any legislation to protect the public against operations of this kind and doubts there will ever be.

"I suspect much of the money from these appeals goes into the pockets of the organizers, but once you get into the area of quasi-religion, the politicians keep their hands off," Hanson said.

Liquor Licence Laws Enforced

The general manager of the provincial Liquor Administration Branch said in Victoria today that a directive has gone out to all of about 3,200 licensed outlets in B.C. on enforcement of regulations.

V. C. Woodland said the memo from his office is not pointing the finger at any particular premises at this point and is prompted partly by the onset of longer daylight evenings and the increased business it brings to the outlets.

"The operation of your establishment is a matter of concern to this department and to the community in which you operate," his memo says in part.

"I'm especially concerned with over-service, over-crowding, rowdyism, boisterous conduct and service to minors. Every precaution should be taken by you and-or by staff to see such incidents do not take place."

Woodland said there have been no particular problems in Greater Victoria at this time.

In an interview earlier he said the branch will certainly be watching what takes place in Nanaimo, where a number of juveniles were apprehended last month in a series of RCMP raids on beer parlors. One RCMP officer described an Nanaimo pub as looking "like a junior high school cafeteria."

Ask The Times

Q. Is there a local club interested in bonsai — the art of growing miniature trees or do you know an experienced person who could give me advice on the subject? D.M.

A. There is no bonsai club in Victoria now but the Vancouver Island Rock and Alpine Society has several members who are bonsai enthusiasts. Mrs. Ed. Lohbrunner, 1101 Lohbrunner, is a collector and an authority on the subject.

Barbara and Peter Watson with children on Rahngild in the Inner Harbor

SHIPWRECK DIDN'T KILL DREAM

It will be their second stab at sailing around the world when Peter and Barbara Watson leave the Inner Harbour this summer in their 40-foot ketch Rahngild.

They're hoping for a happier ending to this saga.

The last one ended in shipwreck.

Watson hails from Kingston, Jamaica, and took three and a half years to build Rahngild at Coal Harbour on the mainland.

He first came to Canada in 1960, "doing all the various jobs people from the West Indies do when they arrive in Canada."

He and his wife met and married in Toronto, coming west as soon as they could to fulfil their dream of owning a boat and sailing around the world.

Rahngild is a day-by-day reminder of their first attempt to sail the seven seas for, along with new gear, she's also fitted out with lots of the equipment that was aboard the Watsons' 36-foot cutter Deep Water, which they bought in New York.

"We got as far as the Bahamas in Deep Water and hit a reef and lost her," Watson explained. "There was no insurance but we salvaged everything and shipped it all the way back to Canada. It was having three crates of mast, rigging and other gear, as well as 10 bags of sails that made me decide to build a boat to put it on."

Luckily, Watson added, they had no children at the time of the shipwreck.

When they set out again this summer their three-year-old daughter Jada-Lee and 19-month-old son Adam will be rounding out the ship's company.

Named after a Danish princess in honor of the Danish background of Watson's mother, the Rahngild is built for offshore sailing.

Her auxiliary diesel engine has a range of 1,000 miles when her 250-gallon fuel tank is filled. She can also carry 250 gallons of water.

Her skipper, too, feels he's more than ready this time around.

"This is the third large boat over 30 feet that I've had," Watson said. "This time we're going to make it."

Special Meet For Centre

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Construction of the proposed activity centre for the handicapped on Darwin Avenue in Saanich could start next week in spite of the fact only half the money needed to build, furnish and landscape is available.

Saanich council has called a special public hearing for Monday to study and, probably, approve a land-use contract for the project.

If the land-use contract is approved a spokesman for Farmer Construction Ltd., contractors for the centre, said construction would start within days. The land has already been cleared.

Floyd Fairclough, president of the Greater Victoria Activity Centre for the Handicapped's board of directors says the decision to go ahead has been made necessary by the inflation spiral.

"It's now or never," Fairclough said. "You have to add $120,000 each year you wait to meet inflation costs."

Plans for the centre, which will be close to the Battin-Fielding housing complex on Vernon, were first mulled over in 1968 and Fairclough said starting the centre now, even if it has to remain an empty shell for a while, will be an indication to the public that the directors mean business.

He said estimated costs of the centre had skyrocketed by 46 per cent since the original estimate was given because of increases in labor and material costs.

He said it will cost about $1.5 million to finish the two-storey building, furnish it, install an elevator and landscape the grounds.

Of the $755,000 donated toward the centre, the board has already paid out $89,893 for the purchase of the site from Saanich.

The Community Chest of Greater Victoria has designated $100,000 of its legacy funds for the centre but under conditions that make it impossible to receive the money now.

One of the conditions is the $100,000 not be given until the total cost of the project is fundable. Others are that the Community Chest have the right to occupy up to 2,000 square feet of the building and that the name of the building be identified with the Chest.

The provincial government has given $300,000 toward the centre and Fairclough said he has written Human Resources Minister Norman Levi asking the grant be increased in proportion to spiralling construction costs.

The letter was followed up with several phone calls to the minister's department, the last three of which were never answred.

Fairclough said he was notified in January that the request was also being studied by health Minister Dennis Cocke and Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall.

Fairclough said Saanich has sold the land at a very reasonable cost in order to help the centre get started and that Farmer Construction was also prepared to co-operate.

"They (Farmer Construction) have agreed to carry financing at a minimal interest rate, less than the banks, for up to $75,000 or $100,000," he said.

'Fishy Deal' Was Labelled Progress

max low

For a man's house is his castle, said Sir Edward Coke back in the 17th century.

And a sad man from Latvia knows in the 20th century just what the learnd judge meant.

Voldemars Melderis has found out just how shattering it can be for a man to lose his castle — and the six acres that went with it.

Just over six years ago in Port Alberni, Voldemars lived happily with his wife and three children and his horse and his dog on a piece of park-like property that boasted a sparkling new home. A tailor of the old school, an artist in cloth who like many scorns the products of the big firms, Melderis worked hard for 13 years building up his own business.

Today all that happiness is gone from the life of Voldemars Melderis.

Dejected, he sits alone in the dingy basement of a rather ghastly red, white and blue house in James Bay, living on Mincome and doing a few tailoring repairs for friends on a battered old sewing machine. The family has split up; the horse was sold; the dog put to sleep. The six acres lie empty in Port Alberni. The house is gone and bulldozers have ripped out fruit trees and lawns and submerged years of tender care.

And all in the name of progress.

Perhaps no one really is to blame. Maybe it was all above board. But it just seems a great shame that this kind of thing continues to happen. And a man can lose everything and we forgive it for hallowed progress.

Plagued by the repeated flooding of Kitsuksis Creek, which meanders through the property, the B.C. government (then under Socred W. A. C. Bennett) highways department purchased the six acres and house and outbuildings all for $18,000.

Melderis feels they tricked him. They did, he says "a very fishy, crooked deal which I will never forget in my lifetime, nor will my family."

Work crews, he says, kept their operations secret, driving on his property without permission, "blazing a trail through the bush, cutting small tree branches, drilling for earth samples and putting surveying sticks with red Khrushchev ribbons on them up to within seven feet of the doorstep."

The highways department wanted to dike the river and put in a small road alongside the dike. But Melderis argued with them that it wasn't necessary to acquire the land so near to his house and stressed that the dike could be built some 50 feet from the house. And if that was so, he and his family could remain there.

But Melderis says he was told that wasn't so. All the land was needed. He would have to get out. He was "forced" to sell, he says. As far as he is concerned, his land was expropriated.

VOLDEMARS MELDERIS . . . a fishy, crooked deal.

Now, six years later, Voldemars can't understand why the house was moved, the lawns and trees all bulldozed out and the dike has been put, just as he, in fact, suggested, a good 50 feet from where now only the foundations of the house remain.

In an emotion-filled letter written in shaky English and bitterly critical of the Bennett government, Melderis has asked Premier Barrett, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald, Highways Minister Graham Lea and Opposition leader Bill Bennett to help him "in this special inquiry."

So far, he has received a letter signed by Barrett saying it was being sent on to Lea and that "you will be hearing from him." And he has received a card from the attorney-general's department acknowledging the letter.

But I doubt very much if there will be the "special inquiry" Voldemars thinks of. To the highways department it's just another one of those letters. They get them frequently, a spokesman says, particularly when land values go up and particularly when a government changes and "everyone wants to claim the previous government screwed them."

Why the land was marked right up to the house but hasn't been used yet, the spokesman explains, is in case of future development. The highways department always acquires more access than it needs immediately so roads can be widened later, he adds. And, says the spokesman, Melderis didn't have to get off the land. "We made an offer and he accpted," he claims.

"Baloney!" says Melderis. "I had to get out all right."

What he wants is the land they are not using for the diking project to be returned to him or to be compensated more in line with the property's true value. He feels he was paid only about a third of what it was worth.

"The things Bennett and Gaglardi did and called it progress were terrible," Melderis says. "They just went ahead and didn't look into things."

If anyone had wanted to pull "a very fishy, crooked deal" then Voldemars Melderis certainly seems an ideal victim.

Once an animal trainer for zoos in Latvia, Germany and several other European countries, he is now a silver-haired but burly, fit-looking 63. And he stays that way by riding his old bicycle all over the city and walking in the sun along the beach. He is a Canadian citizen and has been here 19 years. But you wouldn't think so by his English.

He has that old-world charm and manners. But he is gullible.

When you put away your camera and close your notebook, Voldemars looks a little dubious suddenly. He hasn't been to a lawyer, because he can't afford one. And it seems kind of sad when he says:

"Will this story and photo cost me anything? Because I can't afford to pay for that either . . ."

IT'S FULL STEAM AHEAD FOR SOFTBALL CIRCUITS

The Victoria-area softball leagues go for the "full swing" on a new season this Sunday.

That's when the district's four senior leagues start play.

The Victoria Senior Women's League will be busiest. All eight entries will be involved in the opening-day action at the two-field Hyacinth Park.

Two games will start at 1 p.m. and another pair at 3 p.m.

Men will start on a quieter note. The Stuffy McGinnis Major Men's League at Central Park and the Sidney League at Sansche Park each will open with a single evening offering, starting at 6:30 p.m.

A new eight-team men's league at Heywood Avenue Park will open with an afternoon-evening doubleheader.

The McGinnis League will actually start tonight when Royal Oak Sporting Goods visits Port Angeles for an evening doubleheader.

Considered the premier league, the McGinnis circuit has an inter-city look with Nanaimo and Sooke Merchants joining Port Angeles as out-of-town entries.

With a pitching staff expected to include veterans Barry Gallia, Jim Swanson and Ken Larsen, Nanaimo originally planned to enter the Pacific Coast Fastball League along with Victoria Bates.

For times and sites of games, see the Sports Menu on this page.

Milliken Might Be Reef On Gray's Charted Course

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Mike Gray doesn't want to influence Grant Milliken, but the Uplands amateur thinks it "would be kinda nice" if the Vancouver Island Open golf champion where allowed to play in three European tournaments in July.

Which means Mr. Gray has to defeat Mr. Milliken in Sunday's 36-hole playoff for the CFAX Trophy at Glen Meadows Golf Club to acquire the credentials.

The 24-year-old Gray is concentrating on Sunday's match, but three major European events aren't buried too deeply in the back of his mind.

Gray hopes to play in the Luxembourg Open early in July and, in following weeks, the Swiss Open and Swiss Amateur tournaments.

On his return to Canada, Gray also hopes to qualify for the Canadian Amateur, to be played in Saint John, N.B., Aug. 13-16.

Qualifying for the Canadian event, of course, will depend on his showing in the B.C. Amateur at Nanaimo June 11-14.

His trip to Europe is a certainty. His mother resides in Switzerland, and Mike completed travel arrangements this week.

Playing in the three overseas events isn't as certain.

"The tournaments fall in nicely with my visit to Europe, but I haven't filed any entries yet," he said Friday. "But I do hope to play in them . . . for the experience."

Reaching the final of the Island Open may be only the start of a memorable summer for the 1967 city junior champ.

Gray, whose previous best showing in the Island Open was reaching the semifinals in 1973, has a two handicap. He "feels good" about his game, principally because Mike has started "thinking ahead."

Charting a course in advance, he confessed, wasn't one of his stronger points in the past.

Now, however, it is a part of the game he emphasizes and it reflects in advance to Sunday's date with Milliken, the also-youthful Gorge Vale greenskeeper.

"I'm clubbing myself better than I ever did before," said Gray. As an example, he termed last Sunday's semifinal victory over Oak Bay's Mike Parker as "one of the most satisfying rounds I have ever played."

He scored an approximate five-over par 75, including two double bogeys, but regarded it as a great round considering the windy weather conditions that prevailed at Colwood last Sunday.

Milliken, like Gray, also is participating in his first Island Open final.

Their title argument will start with 18-hole rounds commencing at 9 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

Preceding the championship finalists off the tee, at 8:50 and 1:20, will be handicap finalists Ray Seymour, Jr., and veteran George Mi[illegible] of Gorge Vale.

Despite the "handicap" status, there will be no strokes. Both Murphy and Seymour play off handicaps of nine.

Sophomore Leads

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) —Maria Astrologes, a second-year professional, set a women's course-record 66 Friday to grab the first-round lead in the $40,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association Birmingham golf tournament.

Miss Astrologes put together eight birdies for the record and a one-shot lead over defending champion Janie Blalock. JoAnn Washam shot a 68, two strokes off the pace.

Tied at 69, three shots back, were Donna Caponi Young and Sandra Post, formerly of Oakville, Ont., and now residing in Florida. There were five 70s and twice as many 71s, putting 20 players under par after the opening round.

Timbermen Are Back With 'Old Days' Link

NANAIMO — After an absence of 10 years, Nanaimo Timbermen come marching back into senior lacrosse company tonight.

Timbermen, who dropped out of the old Inter-City League after the 1965 season, make their debut in the Western Lacrosse Association tonight against the national-champion New Westminster Salmonbellies.

And there will be at least one link between the "new" and "old" Timbermen. Among the 20-man roster declared this week by coach Don Morelli will be Alec Dugan son of Arnie Dugan, a standout on Nanaimo teams more than a decade ago.

Among the players declared by Morelli are three Victoria residents—Muzz Bryant, Rick Baker and Harry Ruitenbeek. Bryant formerly played with Victoria Shamrocks.

In addition to Bryant, the only other player with previous senior experience is defenceman Ted Liebich, another former Shamrock.

Goaltending chores will be shared by Earl Nicholson and Gary McLaughlin.

Goalies On Spot

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — It may be open season on goaltenders tonight when two high-scoring major junior hockey teams — Toronto Marlboros and Sherbrooke Beavers — face off in the opening game of the Memorial Cup round-robin tournament.

The Marlboros, winners of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series, qualified for the annaul Canadian championship after a 23-game post-season playoff grind following a runaway first-place finish in the regular season.

New Westminster Bruins, winner of the Western Canada Hockey League championship, make up the third team in the eight-day tournament that takes the top team from each of Canada's three major junior leagues.

Toronto scored 469 goals in the regular season, and had top performances from Bruce Boudreau, the league's leading scorer with a record 165 points on 68 goals and 97 assists, and Mark Napier, a powerful two-way player who has already signed a contract with Toronto Toros of the World Hockey Association.

Sherbrooke, winners of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League, had eight players who scored 30 goals in the regular season. The Beavers swept to a first-place finish and lost only one game in three rounds of playoffs.

The goaltending edge has to be given to Sherbrooke. Nick Sanza was the league's top goaltender in the regular season, appearing in 66 games and registering a 3.05 goals against average. He has seven shutouts, including two in the playoffs and one when Sherbrokke beat the Soviet Union's national junior team 7-0 in an exhibition game.

Steve Bosco and Gary Carr shared the Toronto goaltending duties during the regular season and gave up 303 goals, fifth best in the league. Carr played regularly throughout the playoffs and was inconsistent in the eight-game quarter-final series with Kingston Canadians as well as later tests with Sudbury Wolves and the final series with Hamilton Fincups.

The Bruins are idle until Monday when they take on Sherbrooke. The teams will play each other in the first round. Toronto and New Westminster play Wednesday.

The team with the best record gains a bye into the Sunday, May 11, final while the other two play off Friday. All night games start at 5 p.m. PDT with the Sunday windup scheduled for 11 a.m. on the CTV network.

Monaco Field Sliced to 18

MONTE CARLO (AP) — The Monaco Grand Prix car race — scheduled May 11, two weeks after the accident-marred Spanish round of the world championship at Barcelona — will be limited to 18 Formula I cars, the organizers said Friday.

They said they were in agreement with a request for the limit from the Formula I Constructors Association, but pointed out it was the constructors themselves who two years ago forced the number of starters to 25 from 18.
